U. S. DELEGATES ANTICIPATE CUT IN BATTLESHIPS

Unofficial Indication by Parley Group Points to That End.

35,000 TONS LIMIT MAY DROP TO 25,000

Hope of Holiday on That Type of Vessel Till 1936 Looms.

ANGLO-FRENCH NOTE RELAYED TO LINER

American Headquarters Set for Conferees to Begin Labors Friday.

S. S. George Washington, at Sea, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Reduction in battleship strengths, it was unofficially indicated today, is expected by the American delegation now journeying to London, to be effected at the forthcoming five-power naval conference.

There may be a reduction in the size limit of 35,000 tons, as fixed in the Washington treaty, to a limit which generally has been mentioned of 25,000 tons.

There may also, or instead, be a prolongation of the age of dreadnoughts from 20 to 25 years, or no replacement of some units which had been provided for in the Washington treaty.

Battleship Cut Possible.

While the cruiser problem was the paramount question during the summer and fall in the preliminary Anglo-American negotiations, it now seems evident that battleships offer the most hopeful possibilities for limitation. Although it has been intimated that the British would oppose a complete battleship holiday, because of the possible effect on the labor situation, the general hope in Washington has been that a partial holiday until 1936 might be evolved.

The American delegates devoted today to informal group conversations. They had received from the State Department a summary of the British reply to the French memorandum of last December.

Clerks had worked through the early morning hours to decipher this first official communication dealing with the work of the conference which had been received since the George Washington sailed.

Stimson Withholds Comment.

Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson had no comment to make. He felt that the original note of France was mainly addressed to the British government and had been handed to the other three powers informatively. It was, therefore, considered that the British alone should deal with the matter before the opening of the conference.

This vessel, pressed to its best speed, plowed through heavy seas tonight in a race against time to place the delegation in London by Friday morning. Capt. Randall told Mr. Stimson that the ship was rapidly gaining on its schedule and he hoped to reach Plymouth soon after midnight on Thursday.

The American party in that case would hurry by special train through the remainder of the night to London, which would give Mr. Stimson an opportunity to confer with Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald on Friday. Conferences with the heads of other national delegations will be fitted into the remaining three days before the opening of the conference.

U. S. Headquarters Ready.

London, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—The American delegation to the five-power naval conference will be housed in its London headquarters and ready for work on Friday afternoon.

An American general secretariat will be opened tomorrow with Lammot Belin, first secretary of the American Embassy, in charge.

The activities of the American delegation will thereafter be directed from the hotel where Mr. Stimson intends to stay rather than from the embassy itself.

Nippon Envoy With Premier.

Ambassador Dawes has not yet decided whether he will go to Plymouth to meet the delegates.

Prime Minister MacDonald was closeted for two hours at No. 10 Downing street this afternoon with Reijiro Wakatsuki and the other Japanese delegates.

They discussed conference problems, but issued no statement.

The Japanese delegates are awaiting the arrival of Secretary Stimson for another American-Japanese meeting before the formal opening of the sessions on January 21.

The British press printed no great amount of comment today on England's reply to the French naval note. Commentators emphasized references to the disappointment of public hopes if nothing substantial was achieved at the conference, especially after the nations had assented to the covenant

Gen. Smuts Is Weary After Day in Capital

Underwood & Underwood.

GEN. JAN CHRISTIAN SMUTS, center, former premier of the Union of South Africa, upon his arrival here yesterday was met by the South African Envoy to the United States and Mrs. Erik H. Louw.

South African Leader Is Faced With Round of Fetes.

It took the National Capital of the United States to test the energy of Gen. Jan Christian Smuts, the South African military leader and former premier, who has trekked for miles on the veldt of his native country without becoming exhausted.

Gen. Smuts arrived in Washington early yesterday morning and was on the go repeatedly until late last night. Long before the day's crowded program was scheduled to com to its end, the visitor confessed that he was weary. The general is filled with the physical energy of the Boer, but he has found the speedy life of the States more debilitating than climbing Table Mountain. However, he has said that he is enjoying every minute of his stay in this country.

To more than one of the many acquaintances he met yesterday, he repeated the invitation, "Come to South Africa; it will do you good." This is the advice that he has given to Americans in all the cities that he has visited. Late yesterday afternoon, when he returned to the Carlton Hotel

NEW IMPETUS GIVEN AIRPORT MOVEMENT

Convince Congress of Need, Is Cry at Board of Trade Meeting.

WELL KNOWN MEN TALK

"Get going and they can't stop you."

With these words, Gen. John F. O'Ryan, World War veteran, now president of the Colonial Airways Corporation, reawakened the movement to establish a model airport in Washington at an aviation meeting of the Board of Trade in the Willard Hotel ballroom last night.

Gen. O'Ryan declared that each individual citizen should work for the establishment of an airport by helping to convince "those on the hill" of the importance of such an improvement to the National Capital. He said that in planning an airport the people of Washington should look three years ahead and try to decide what air facilities will be needed then, as it would take that length of time to bring about the airport's establishment.

Gen. O'Ryan was one of the principal speakers at the meeting. The others were Senator Hiram Bingham, chairman of the congressional joint committee on airports; Col. Paul Henderson, organizer of air mail service during his term as Assistant Postmaster General, now vice president of the Transcontinental Air Transport

U. S. BUILDING FUND IS PROVIDED IN BILL

House Gets Treasury-Post-office Appropriation Act for 1931.

TRIANGLE ITEM GROWS

Funds for continuing the Federal building program here and throughout the country are carried in the Treasury-Postoffice appropriation bill for the fiscal year of 1931, which was introduced in the House yesterday.

For the purchase of additional private property in the Pennsylvania avenue-Mall triangle, the bill carries the sum of $7,000,000, which is $2,000,000 more than was appropriated for the current year.

For continuing the Federal building program here and in the States, the bill carries a total of $23,000,000. More money for this purpose is expected to be provided later in deficiency bills.

The appropriation for the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, which comes under the Treasury Department, represents a decrease of $251,260, compared with the current appropriation. It was explained by Chairman Wood, of the appropriations committee, that this cut would not necessarily result in a cut in personnel.

However, there will be a reduction in the local force of the Internal Revenue Bureau. Forty-eight employes now receiving a total of $70,-

"Is the president conducting another New Year reception in The Post Building?" inquired an interested bystander as he witnessed the line of men and women entering the office of the manager of The Post's $20,000 opportunity campaign.

"I'm the man they are coming to shake hands with," replied an old gentleman who stood near the door welcoming the throng. "I am Opportunity. Of course you have heard of me. Probably I have knocked on your door before this, but anyway, come along in and let me tell you of my latest offer.

HERMAN BRADY IS RELEASED ON BOND OF $1,000

Promise of Immunity Is Still Withheld by Parran.

TESTIMONY PLEDGED IN HEARING THURSDAY

Leroy Now Only Person Held in Seat Pleasant Bomb Atrocity.

WASHINGTON CLEW IS TRACED IN VAIN

Capital Man Said to Have Knowledge of Case Is Quizzed by Officer.

Herman Brady, 22, was released from the Marlboro Jail late yesterday. He had been held there for eight days in connection with the Seat Pleasant bomb massacre that killed his wife and two others.

The young farmer was released after his attorney, M. Hampton Magruder, had promised State's Attorney J. Frank Parran, that he would testify Thursday afternoon when his brother, Leroy Brady, 26, is arraigned for a preliminary hearing.

A hearing last week had to be called off when Herman Brady, on advice of his counsel, refused to testify unless he was granted immunity from future prosecution.

Immunity Promise Withheld.

State's Attorney Parran refused to grant him immunity then, and he says he will refuse to grant him immunity in the future.

Leroy Brady, a Washington automobile mechanic, is now the only person held in connection with the New Year's Day bomb tragedy. He is in the Marlboro Jail and is charged with first-degree murder.

In releasing Herman Brady yesterday, however, State's Attorney Parran did not relinquish entirely his hold on him. He listed him as a State witness and made him put up a $1,000 bond to guarantee his appearance Thursday.

Parran Had No Choice.

As a matter of fact, Parran had no choice but to release Brady under the conditions that he was released. In the first place, Brady's counsel was about to apply for a writ of habeas corpus, and, in the second, he could not, without preferring a charge against him, hold him much longer anyway. To have done so, Brady's attorneys argued, would have been to deny him the constitutional guarantee of "due process of law."

Herman Brady was arrested Sunday night a week ago along with his brother, Leroy, after detectives announced that he had signed a statement implicating the latter.

The detectives quoted Herman as saying that he had told Leroy about Potomac Clerk, 20, Jailed After Stolen Ring Is Found Pawned.

Raymond Bennett Lunceford, 20-year-old clerk, of Potomac, Va., was arrested yesterday by Detective Sergts. Charles J. P. Weber and Howard E. Ogle and accused of taking a $125 diamond ring from Mrs. Lucenda B. Hesse, of 3024½ R street northwest, who has befriended the youth on numerous occasions.

Lunceford, the detectives said, was a companion of Mrs. Hesse's nephew, who recently died. Because of the friendship, according to the detectives, the youth was permitted freedom of the Hesse residence.

On January 7 Mrs. Hesse reported the theft of the diamond ring from her home. Investigation by police resulted in location of the ring in a pawnshop, and Lunceford's alleged connection with the case. A warrant charging the youth with grand larceny was sworn out.

Woman Goes on Trial In Death of Children

Camden, N. J., Jan. 13 (A.P.).—The trial of Gladys May Parks, charged with the murder of two young motherless children last summer, got under way in the Camden County Court today before Supreme Court Justice Frank T. Lloyd. It required less than four hours to pick the twelve men.

Although a large number of women were examined as prospective jurors, all were rejected for one reason or another. Miss Parks is charged with killing Dorothy and Timothy Rogers, 4 and 2 years, children of Alan N. Rogers, of Woodbury, who had been left in her care.

NEW DRY STRUCTURE SOUGHT BY PRESIDENT; CRIME REPORT BRINGS BOTH SIDES COMFORT

Prohibitionists and Foes Alike Seize Upon It as Upholding Them.

MEASURES TO CARRY PROPOSALS STARTED

Williamson Ready With Bill Giving Justice Section Control.

WETS ASK VOLSTEAD ACT FULLY COVERED

Wagner and Andrew Present Resolutions for Survey of Its Suitability.

(Associated Press.)

Determined efforts by dry and wet groups to use the law enforcement commission's report as a wedge for amending the law to their respective likings were indicated last night in congressional reactions to recommendations for legislation transmitted by President Hoover.

Promises and demands mingled while enforcement of dry laws dominated attention of senators and representatives. House leaders pledged immediate action toward carrying out proposals for new statutes and by nightfall several measures were in preparation. Assurance of early consideration also came from the tariff-busy Senate

Drys and wets generaly accepted the commission's report which avoided any judgment upon the merits of the prohibition laws. The wets made it clear, however, that they wanted the commission to go farther and submit a report on the Volstead act itself.

Wagner Voices Wet Demands.

Senator Wagner (Democrat), New York, put forward the wets' demand in the Senate. He offered a resolution immediately after the reading of the commission's report, seeking to ask President Hoover to direct the commission to inquire into the "suitability of existing prohibition laws for the promotion of temperance."

Representative Andrew (Republican), Massachusetts, followed through with the introduction in the House of a bill authorizing $1,000,000 for the law enforcement commision to investigate and report to Congress what changes it deemed necessary in the system of dealing with intoxicating liquors.

Both the Wagner and Andrew propositions were laid aside without debate, however, and the prospects for their consideration seemed doubtful.

Tilson States House View.

Representative Tilson, of Connecticut, Republican leader in the House, issued a statement asserting he believed "it is the overwhelming desire of the House to support President Hoover in his proposals."

The commission's report was transmitted to half a dozen different committees in the House by Speaker Longworth. In the Senate Vice President Curtis dispatched it to the judiciary committee alone.

Representative Williamson (Republican), South Dakota, chairman of the House expenditures committee, announced later he was prepared to introduce today a bill transferring dry enforcement from the jurisdiction of the Treasury Department to the Justice Department. His bill would leave control of narcotics and industrial alcohol in the Treasury, as recommended by the President, with James M. Doran, Commissioner of Prohibition, remaining in charge.

New Title for Doran.

The recommendation of President Hoover and the Law Enforcement Commission for the transfer of the unit was referred to Representative Williamson's committee by Speaker Longworth yesterday. The measure had been in the process of formulation for several weeks and is understood to meet with the approval of the Chief Executive.

Representative Williamson's measure proposes the creation of a new title for the post now held by Mr. Doran, to be known as the Commissioner of Narcotics and Industrial Alcohol.

The bill will be submitted by Mr. Williamson to Secretary Mellon and Attorney General Mitchell for reports before committee hearings will be held. Mr. Williamson said he expected the two department heads to appear before his committee at the hearing probably next week.

Snell Reserves Comment.

Chairman Snell, of the House rules committee, which controls the course of legislation in that branch, announced that "we want to find out what legislation is wanted and to get it through quickly." He reserved comment on the report until he had read it.

There were expressions from both sides of the Capitol that the commis-

Marine Gridiron Star New White House Aid

Capt. Frank B. Geottge Also Named to Assist Gen. Neville.

Capt. Frank B. Geottge, U. S. M. C., widely known as one of the greatest football stars produced by the service, yesterday was appointed a White House aid as well as aid de camp to Maj. Gen. Wendell C. Neville, commandant of the Marine Corps.

The Navy Department, in its announcement, did not make public whether the appointment involved other shifts among Marines as White House aids. Capt. Allen Buchanan, Navy aid to the President, explained in response to inquiries that, due to a slight illness, he had not been at the White House for several days and had not seen the orders for Capt. Geottge. Capt. John Halle, another Marine Corps White House aid, is on duty with the American delegation to the London naval conference.

Capt. Geottge, at present stationed on post and staff duty at the Marine Corps base at Quantico, has been ordered to report here Wednesday.

The new aid has achieved considerable prominence in a picturesque service career, which began when

GERMAN'S PROTEST FAILS AT THE HAGUE

Reparations Parley Ignores Schacht's Much-Advertised "Bombshell."

NEW BANK PLAN ISSUE

The Hague, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, head of the Reichsbank, today opposed the second Hague conference on reparations in the matter of the international bank, but the conference, after brief consideration of his stand, ignored it and went on with its work.

The explosion of the much-advertised bombshell of the leading German banker failed to make anywhere near as much noise as had been anticipated. He informed the conference in a letter to Jackson E. Reynolds, of New York, that the Reichsbank could not subscribe to capital of the bank for international settlements because the Young plan had been modified.

After a short discussion by leaders in the conference it was agreed that body should not permit interference in its work by Dr. Schacht on purely political grounds and the jurists were instructed to go on with preparation of the protocol for adoption of the Young plan.

The bank committee was requested to complete organization of the bank regardless of whether the reichsbank participates. Intimation was made in the course of debate that the board of directors of the reichsbank had not said their last word and that praticipation might still be possible.

Mr. Snowden, British chancellor of the exchequer, during the discussion said it was not possible to allow Dr. Schacht to veto decisions taken by the governments. The German banker had made participation in the bank conditional on abandonment by Great Britain of liquidation of sequestered property and abandonment by France of all military and political sanctions.

Premier Tardieu, of France, stated that the Young plan could function

DRIVE IS LAUNCHED ON 'PARROT FEVER'

Surgeon General Asks Aid in National Campaign Against Malady.

34 CASES ARE RECORDED

(Associated Press.)

Surgeon General Cumming, of the Public Health Service, last night telegraphed health officials in nine States asking for cooperation in a Nation-wide investigation of serious illnesses attributed to "parrot fever," or psittacosis.

Federal authorities said unofficial reports yesterday showed a total of 34 cases of the malady in addition to three deaths already recorded.

To answer numerous inquiries, Dr. Cumming issued a statement explaining briefly that the disease is "an acute, often fatal disease of parrots, usually occurring in newly acquired birds * * * but rarely transmitted from man to man."

After conferring with assistant surgeons general, Dr. Cumming said he believed the situation warrants "serious attention."

He placed Dr. Charles Armstrong, veteran epidemiologist, in charge of a field investigation of cases and suspected cases of the fever, ordering him to follow the trail of infected parrots and human sickness from State to State to make first hand observations.

At the same time Dr. Cumming ordered the research and domestic quarantine divisions to join forces in "determining the channels" through which the disease has spread and is spreading, and the means of controlling it."

Dr. A. M. Stimson, chief of the research division, said he received an official report that the germ of parrot fever had been isolated in Baltimore, and that he would make every effort to obtain cultures for study of the bacilli here.

Dr. W. F. Draper, chief of the domestic quarantine division, said his Special Hoover Message Accompanies Findings to Congress.

MORE DISTRICT LAWS REGARDED NECESSARY

Reorganizing of Courts, Adding to Prosecutors Are Recommended.

U. S. COMMISSIONERS WOULD ACT AS JUDGES

Clothing of State and City Officers With Federal Power Proposed.

By CARLISLE BARGERON.

Almost on the eve of the tenth anniversary of prohibition, President Hoover, flanked by his National Law Enforcement Commission and his Departments of Justice and Treasury, yesterday moved definitely to set up a new enforcement structure, admitting down and carried general disrespect for law with it.

But the President proposes a new structure instead of turning back in the noble experiment.

The Law Enforcement Commission subscribes to this, offering three important proposals of its own and then as if in defiance of its critics who called it weak-kneed, emphasizes that the proposed new structure is without prejudice to its ultimate findings. This determination to give "courageous" conclusions ultimately rather runs through the commission's reports. It almost, in fact, constitutes a threat. The commission seeks to emphasize, too, that all the time the hullabaloo was being raised about it, about its being stampeded into making a preliminary report, that it already made one to the President—way back on November 21, in fact.

President's Suggestions.

The President in his accompanying letter to Congress summarized the various recommendations thus:

Reorganization of the Federal court structure so as to give relief from congestion.

Concentration of responsibility in detection and prosecution of prohibition violations.

Consolidation of the various agencies engaged in prevention of smuggling of liquor, narcotics, other merchandise and aliens over our fronteirs.

Provision of adequate court and prosecuting officials.

Expansion of Federal prisons and reorganization of parole and other practices.

Specific legislation for the District of Columbia.

Let States Do Their Share.

But out of the commission's detailed study seems to come this outstanding proposal:

The Federal Government proposes to set up the courts for prosecution of offenders and to clothe State, county and municipal officers with Federal arresting powers in order that the States may take over more of the burden than they have heretofore.

"It has never been contemplated that the whole task of enforcing prohibition should be borne by the Federal Government," said Attorney General Mitchell.

"Unification, centralization of responsibility and means of insuring cooperation between Federal and State agencies, are things to which we must come, quite apart from the exigencies of enforcement of prohibition, but which cannot be achieved overnight," said the commission.

Constitutionality Involved.

It was the recommendation to clothe the State, county and municipal arresting power, together with the recommendation that the powers of United States commissioners be broadened to handle "casual" prohibition offenses and that to make injunction by padlock more available,

NEWS of SUBURBAN Washington and the Surrounding States

Appears on Pages 14, 15 and 24 Today

that constituted the three revolutionary proposals, so to speak.

Out of the whole program they will arouse the greatest storm and extend over many months before they are enacted. The commission itself says constitutional questions are involved in the proposal to broaden the powers of United States commissioners, but thinks that the preponderance of legal opinion sustains the idea.

Of the constitutionality of clothing local officers with Federal arresting power, in prohibition cases alone, of course, the commission says there can be no doubt.

Of the six proposals listed by the President, that to concentrate enforcement in the Department of Justice will quite probably be the first to take legislative reform. Notwithstanding that many drys doubt the wisdom of it the tendency in Congress generally is to go along with the President on the matter.

Unified Border Control.

It will be six months or perhaps longer before the Treasury is ready to submit a definite plan for reorganization of the ports of entry from Canada and Mexico. The President, indeed, does not list this in his major recommendations.

The Treasury said that quite naturally the matter would have to be taken up with the neighboring countries.

The President does list a unified border control and the Treasury says that surveys are now being made "upon which estimates of the increased costs" over the present customs and immigration patrols may be based.

Mr. Hoover lays the greatest stress in his accompanying message on the proposals to reduce congestion in the Federal courts. Attorney General Mitchell has already submitted a plan for more Federal judges.

More District Attorneys.

His recommendations for more district attorneys and increased pay for them went to the judiciary committees of the respective Houses, which for many months will bear the brunt of the coming fight. When one realizes that Senator Norris is the chairman of the Senate judiciary committee and that it has other members unfriendly to him, his request for a joint committee to carry out the reform is more appreciated.

The commission's proposal to make padlock injunctions more available is simply an amendment designed to relieve situations now encountered where there is a minority, nonresident or silent partner in a building which it is designed to padlock, and upon whom service can not be made.

Prohibition offenders to get security from padlock injunctions resort to the expedient of giving a nonresident a small holding in the building, the commission finds. The proposed amendment would provide that when the court is satisfied that this subterfuge is being resorted to service may be made upon the nonresident by publication, either by name or in John Doe form.

Power of Commissioners.

It is the broadening of United States commissioners' powers that threatens the most trouble.

Briefly, the commissioners would be empowered to sit in judgment on "usual" offenders or those against whom the penalty could not be more than a $500 fine or six months in jail.

Such an offender would be haled before a commissioner and if he pleaded guilty, the commissioner would so report to the court. If he pleaded not guilty the commissioner would determine his guilt or innocence and so report to the court which would pass sentence. The accused within three days after the commissioner's finding could demand a jury trial in which event the district attorney could elect whether to proceed against him either by information or indictment.

The presentation of the case to the commissioner would, of course, be by information instead of indictment. It is this doing away with the indictment that raises the serous constitutional question, but one which the commission believes the preponderance of legal opinion decides in its favor.

Believed Better Plan.

The Constitution, the commission argues, holds that an accused must be proceeded against by indictment in the case of infamous crimes. The commission then argues that legal authority holds an infamous crime one that is punishable by a year in the penitentiary or at hard labor. A jail sentence of six months is therefore not punishment of an infamous crime, it contends.

The commission says this is believed to be a far better plan than the setting up of additional courts and would relieve one of the greatest menaces to present enforcement, the "bargain days" whereby district attorneys have to accept wholesale pleas of guilty with nominal fines to relieve their dockets.

Some lawyers on Capitol Hill immediately pointed out, however, that the district attorney would have the power of coercion over the accused in that if he did not accept the commissioner's finding he would be faced with the discretionary power of the district attorney to proceed against him on the basis of an infamous crime, or one carrying a severer sentence.

There is the suggestion in this, of course, that the administration is prepared to accept the responsibility for prosecuting petty offenders, something that it has heretofore been contended was for the States.

Clashes With Doran Testimony.

This is rather in conflict, too, with the testimony of Prohibition Commissioner Doran before the House appropriations committee which was made available yesterday.

"Our fixed policy," he testified, "is to use the Federal force as a preventative against the importation of liquor from without, to supervise, regulate and control the manufacture and distribution of industrial alcohol and medicinal liquors.

"With respect to the illicit production of liquor and beer in the United States, to work on the sources and transportation to the greatest degree possible, and every time we have to take numerous officers off that work to work on minor cases, except for the value we get out of the thing by way of securing information as to source, I feel that the effort is hardly worth the time."

Only Want $15,000,000.

Incidentally, he said, prohibition enforcement only wanted $15,000,000 this year, about what it has been getting, because there is no need to increase the number of arrests until the courts are prepared to take care of them.

But a different picture of the administration's attitude toward prosecuting petty offenders is presented when it proposes, through the commission's report, that local officers be empowered to arrest them.

It may or may not be significant that the President did not mention this in his accompanying message. The commission proposes it in what it calls a supplemental report to one which it claims to have made to the President on November 21.

The proposal is that:

"Any State, county or municipal officer of the law may, on discovery of any person in the act of transporting in violation of this title intoxicating liquors in any wagon, buggy, automobile, water or aircraft, seize the same and any and all intoxicating liquors found therein being transported contrary to law, and arrest any person in charge of the same, and may thereupon proceed against such person and property in the appropriate Federal court as hereinbefore provided."

Problem Gloomily Painted.

There is no question of the constitutionality of this procedure, the commission says, and it proposes the matter as if there are many local officers who would like to help out but can do no more now than call the violation to the attention of a Federal officer.

When this proposal is taken, however, with that to set up commissioner courts and that to build additional penitentiaries, there is the picture of the Federal Government offering to prosecute and jail the offenders if the local authorities will arrest them.

The commission either, unwittingly or as an effort at courageousness, gives a lugubrious picture of the whole prohibition problem.

The reported arrest in the last fiscal year of "upward of 80,000 persons from every part of continental United States indicates a staggering number of what might be called focal points of infection," it says.

To these, it says, must be added as "points of possible contact from without," 18,700 miles of mainland of the "continental United States at every point of which infection is possible."

1,000 Smuggling Roads.

"The number of smuggling roads from Canada," it says, "is reported as at least 1,000, and on the Mexican border there are entrances into the United States at most points along a boundary of 1,744 miles."

As to that very moot question of how deep the commission is going into the prohibition question, it says this, suggestive of a promise:

"To reach conclusions of any value, we must go into deep questions of public opinion and the criminal law. We must look into the several factors in the attitude of the people, both generally and in particular localities, toward laws in general and toward specific regulations. We must note the attitude of the pioneer toward such things. We must bear in mind the Puritan's objection to administration, the Whig tradition of a 'right of revolution,' the conception of natural rights, classical in our policy, the Democratic tradition of individual participation in sovereignty, the attitude of the business world toward local regulation of enterprise, the clash of organized interests and opinions in a diversified community, and the divergencies of attitude in different sections of the country and as between different groups in the same locality. We must not forget the many historical examples of large-scale public disregard of laws in our past. To give proper weight to these things, in connection with the social and economic effects of the prohibition law, is not a matter of a few months."

The drys won't like that.

DOMESTIC SUGAR BOUNTY PROPOSED

Howell Offers Measure as Howley-Smoot Bill Amendment.

BORAH SPEAKS TODAY

(Associated Press.)

A Federal bounty to domestic sugar growers and refiners, which would be similar in operation to the export debenture plan, now a part of the tariff bill, was proposed yesterday by Senator Howell, of Nebraska, while the Senate plodded along with its fourth day of debate on the proposed higher sugar levy without reaching a vote.

The Republican Independent senator offered his proposal in the form of an amendment to the Hawley-Smoot measure. It had been discussed at a meeting of Western Republicans, but no agreement to support it as a group was reached. Senator Borah, of Idaho, a leader of the group, who has said he would favor a bounty in the absence of proof that a higher duty would be beneficial, will address the Senate today on the sugar question.

Howell said off the floor that his amendment would provide for retention of present tariffs and a bounty or an "allowance" of three-quarters of a cent a pound on sugar produced in continental United States. He estimated its cost at $18,000,000 a year as against $54,000,000, in event the increase in the pending bill is adopted.

How Bounty Would Operate.

Three-fifths of the bounty would go to growers of sugar beets and cane, while the remainder would go to refiners. The cost would be made up through the sale of customs warrants which would be usable at par value within a year of issuance in payment of import duties.

Title to the warrants, which would be issued by the Treasury, would be transferable, and if any were sold at below par the difference would be deducted pro rata from the bounty to be paid refiners.

No mention of the bounty was made on the floor during the entire five-hour session. Senator Waterman (Republican), Colorado, took up the entire day with an assault on what he termed "this damnable thing called Cuban reciprocity" and a plea for adoption of the rate of 2.20 cents a pound on Cuban raws, as is proposed by the finance committee.

Present Rate Is 1.76 Cents.

The present rate is 1.76 cents and the House bill provides 2.40 cents.

Senator Borah gained the floor in the last half hour to make a speech.

So much time was consumed in obtaining a quorum, however, that he put it off until today.

Chairman Smoot said he did not believe a vote could be reached today, as at first thought, because at least five senators still want to speak.

GEN. SMUTS IS TIRED AFTER CAPITAL DAY

after the day's busy round, he pledged with members of his party to allow him a brief rest. As it was, he barely had time to dress for dinner.

Life in South Africa and in the United States is different in that an American would find trekking on the veldt just as arduous as a typical South African has found the social round of an American city, members of the Smuts party point out.

First Day in Capital Hectic.

Gen. Smuts' first day in the National Capital included luncheon at the Capitol where he was introduced to each senator during a three-minute recess and a visit to the Smithsonian Institute, where he was presented with a five-volume set of 400 plates of America wild flowers painted in natural colors, and dinner at the South African Legation. This is only a part of the busy day that taxed the general's energy.

The general will make his one public address in Washington tonight. The occasion will be a dinner of the committee on the Cause and Cure of War. Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt will preside. Gen. Smuts will be presented to President Hoover today. The South African general and the President are old friends, having met in the days before the war.

Erich H. Louw, South African minister, will tender the visitor a luncheon a tthe Metropolitan Club today.

Numerous members of Congress and diplomats will be present.

To Be Guests of Envoys.

He will be the honor guest of Vincent Massey, Canadian Minister, at the British Embassy tomorrow morning. He will be the dinner guest of Sir Esme and Lady Howard at the British Embassy tomorrow night.

Before leaving Washington Thursday on his way home to South Africa, Gen. Smuts will place a wreath on the tomb of Woodrow Wilson at Washington Cathedral.

The bond of friendship between Gen. Smuts and the War President was cemented by their relationship at the Peace Treaty Conference and by the fact that Gen. Smuts was the father of the League of Nations idea and one of its builders.

Burke Is Sought Posing as Doctor

Centralia, Wash., Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Police of the Pacific Northwest today began a search for Fred Burke, notorious Chicago gangster, after Ora Love, 20, of Cincinnati, identified a picture of the man whom he claimed had hired him to drive an automobile to the coast a month ago.

Love identified a photograph of Burke as "Dr. C. Rundel." Love said the man posed as a doctor and asked him to wrive his large automobile from Ohio to Vancouver, B. C.

The man stopped here last night and Love was sent to get some food for a dog owned by "Dr. Rundel." When Love returned he said his employer had driven the automobile away.

Dumb Waiter Aids Police in Arrests

Constant Squeaking Leads to Holding of Four in $360 Robbery.

After a dumb waiter "squealed," three young men and a young woman were taken in custody early yesterday in an apartment building at Eighteenth and California streets northwest in connection with a $360 robbery of a haberdashery.

Vexed by the constant squeaking of a dumb waiter in the apartment building, a tenant telephoned police. Detectives D. B. Crooke and R. W. Hopkins, of the Eighth Precinct, upon arrival at the building reported they observed Charles Robert Bolten, 27 years old, operating the dumb waiter, which was loaded with clothes.

The detectives then went to an apartment above, where, they said, Robert Duffell, of N street northwest, near Fourteenth street; David Russell and Mrs. Alma Russell were, who said they resided in the apartment. The clothing recovered, detectives declared, was stolen shortly before 1 o'clock from the haberdashery of J. T. Klawans, a few doors from the apartment building. The quartet were held for investigation.

Gank Killing Suspect's Story Is Unconvincing

Charleston, W. Va., Jan. 13 (A.P.).—After interviewing a suspect held here in the Valentine Day slaying of seven Chicago gangsters, Chief of Detectives John Egan, of Chicago, tonight said, "Right now I don't believ his story. It is entirely different from all results of the investigation."

Egan, who came here today from Chicago, said he would not take the man back to the Illinois city on the basis of what he learned through interrogation of the suspect, whose name had not been revealed.

RITES OF DEPARTURE CONDUCTED FOR SIX

Sisters Leave Soon for India to Augment Catholic Forces There.

11 MISSIONS ASKED FOR

Ceremonies of departure were held at St. Patrick's Church yesterday afternoon for two Sisters of the Holy Cross and four Sisters from the Society of Catholic Medical Missionaries, who are leaving shortly for India to augment the Catholic religious and medical forces there. The Right Rev. Charles Thomas, D. D., of St. Patrick's Church, presided at the ceremonies, which included a sermon by the Rev. John B. Delaunay, C. S. C., J. C. D., assistant superior of the Foreign Mission Seminary, Brookland, D. C., who only recently returned from India himself.

The Society of Catholic Medical Missionaries, under whose auspices four of the sisters are making the journey, although established only four years, has already been asked to undertake eleven medical missions in the Orient, which shows the great need of doctors and nurses in those mission fields. The unique feature of this society is that it is the first organization in the Catholic Church that combines community life with the medical profession.

Dr. Dorothy Finnigan, who is a graduate of the Dental School of St. Andrews University, Scotland; Sister M. Frances Herb, R. N., who is a graduate of the Mercy Hospital, Oshkosh, Wis., and Sister M. Therese McCardle, R. N., who graduated from St. Mary's Hospital, San Francisco, Calif., will go to the Mill Hill Prefecture Apostolic of Kashmir and Kafristan, where the society maintains a hospital. Sister M. Helen Herb, R. N., who is a graduate of the Deaconnesses Hospital, Buffalo, N. Y., will join the pioneers of a new Medical Mission Center in the Holy Cross Diocese of Dacca, Bengal.

FOUR DEAD AS GANG BLOWS UP PAY CAR

Bandits Flee Without Loot After Setting Off Blast in Pennsylvania.

INJURED MAN SAVES DAY

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Three men were killed instantly and three others were injured, one fatally, today, when bandits dynamited a pay car of the Glen Alden Coal Co.

The dead: Arthur E. Webb, 32, Scranton, paymaster in charge of the car; Frank Bimski, 40, miner of Plymouth, riding on the pay car; Martin Burns, 31, section foreman, Warrior Run; James Shovlin, 32, section foreman, of Sugar Notch, who died in a hospital of his injuries.

The injured: Fred W. Pfaff, 50, guard, of Scranton, crushed feet and internal injuries, condition critical; John S. Sookil, 50, miner, Plymouth, slightly injured.

The explosion occurred near the Truesdale colliery of the Glen Alden Co. The pay roll, containing $33,000 was intact, except for a few bills which were torn to pieces by the force of the explosion. No trace of the bandits was found. An organized search of the section, which is isolated, immediately was begun.

Motorman Spreads Alarm.

According to others who were riding in the dynamited pay car, a charge of explosive was placed under the track and set off by electricity from a barricade more than 200 yards away.

The pay car was drawn by a mine motor. As it neared the Truesdale colliery, with the funds for the miners, a terrific explosion occurred. The force of the blast uncoupled the motor and the pay car. Without stopping for investigation Harry Powell, motorman, of Wilkes-Barre, proceeded under full power to the colliery and spread the alarm.

The blast had been heard there but with muffled detonations, an everyday occurrence in mining villages, nothing was thought of it until Powell in the small-motored jig incoherently told his tale.

Posses immediately hastened back to the scene. There they found the pay car off the track and partly wrecked. The remains of Webb, Bimski, and Burns were found as well as the mangled bodies of Pfaff and Shovlin, both of which still held life.

Miner Saves Pay Roll.

Sookil, who was but slightly injured, saved the pay roll. Dazed by the force of the blast, he managed to gain his feet and stood over the iron bound pay chest which was bolted to the floor of the pay car. One of the bandits approached. The lid of the pay chest had been ripped off and bits of currency were scattered about the floor.

Warning the approaching bandit away, Sookil struck a menacing attitude and the bandit, without offering attack, and probably alarmed by the noise of the returning motor car, fled.

Officials who later examined the pay chest found most of its contents intact, pressed down into the chest by concussion.

Car Was Auxiliary.

Earlier in the afternoon several hundred workmen employed at the main colliery of the Truesdale workings had been paid off from the main pay car. This work completed, an auxiliary pay car was attached to the small motor gig and with Paymaster Webb started the long, steep climb up Newport mountain.

It had nearly reached its destination when the blast came. News of the robbery attempt did not reach residents of the sections for some time. Then a constantly mounting stream of curious trekked to the spot.

By that time a hastily improvised searching party, armed with shotguns, pistols and other weapons was scouring the countryside. Included in the party were civilians, miners of the Glen Alden company, police of Hanover township and Nanticoke and State troopers, coal and iron police and county detectives.

The Truesdale Colliery is one of the largest in the Anthracite region and is located in Hanover township, slightly more than a mile from Nanticoke.

Woman Missing With Young Son

Police Asked to Search for Mrs. Daisy Spadel, Missing From Home.

Fearing that his wife, Mrs. Daisy H Spadel, 35 years old, who strangely disappeared from home yesterday afternoon with their 4-year-old son, might have been suffering from a temporary attack of aphasie, John Spadel, of 6629 Harlan place northwest, last night appealed to police in an attempt to locate her.

Mrs. Spadel left her home yesterday afternoon about 3 o'clock. She had dressed the boy; and when they left, no one suspected that all was not well. When she had not returned at a late hour last night, however, Mr. Spadel became alarmed.

Mrs. Spadel might have left the city, police learned from the husband. They were given an address in Germantown, Mass., as a place where she might have gone. Word has been sent to that city.

The woman was dressed in a red hat and a dark blue coat with fur collar and cuffs. The boy was wearing a blue coat with brass buttons.

42 ARE DEATH TOLL IN EUROPEAN STORM

FLOOD TIDE IS FEARED

London, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—A great gale raging over England last night and early today and then sweeping on to northern Europe caused the death of 42 persons in England, on the continent and at sea. This list of known dead is supplemented by a longer one of those suffering from injuries.

Twenty-three sailors went down with the naval tug St. Genny, which foundered last night while hove to in mountainous channel seas, 32 miles off Ushant. Only five survivors from the crew were picked up.

Fourteen deaths occurred inland in England. Most of them were caused by falling trees and masonry and similar accidents, though a youth was actually blown into the water and drowned while standing on Ramsgate Pier.

Telegraph and telephone service was disrupted in many districts, cutting off wire communications between London and some of the big provincial centers.

The liner Antonia, arriving at Liverpool today, reported that she had been unable to call at Queenstown owing to the violence of the gale. Her wireless aerial had been blown down.

Reports reaching London from the continent indicate that the storm was violent there also, though the only deaths reported so far are those of a father, his son and his daughter, and two companions, who were drowned by the foundering of their motorboat at Vestfjord, Norway.

Fifteen steamers had taken refuge in the Elbe Estuary near Hamburg from the force of a hurricane raging in Heligoland Bight. Stormy weather was reported prevailing all over the North Sea.

The inhabitants of Hamburg feared that a flood tide pushed up by high winds and seas would flood the lowlands at the mouth of the Elbe.

F. H. SMITH TANGLE CAUSES NEW ACTION

Investor Seeks Removal of Henry as Trustee of Corcoran Courts.

RECEIVERSHIP IS ASKED

Samuel J. Henry, president of the F. H. Smith Co.; Henry J. Robb, Robert M. Taylor, the F. H. Smith Co. and Morris Cafritz were named defendants in a suit filed yesterday in District of Columbia Supreme Court by Nancy Deland, of Bethesda, Md. The plaintiff seeks to have a receiver appointed to collect moneys from Cafritz and asks that a new trustee be substituted for Henry as trustee under the deed of trust for the Corcoran Court Apartments.

The petition sets out that in June, 1925, the Corcoran Courts Corporation was organized and that $800,000 was borrowed in order to build an eight-story apartment building. Henry figured in the deal as party of the second part and the bonds for the money were payable at the Smith Co.'s office.

Mr. Henry, the petition points out, is president of the Smith Co. and a heavy stockholder. It also is stressed that the offices of the company have been moved to New York and that he no longer can give his attention to his duties as trustee under the mortgage. In addition it is pointed out that the Smith Co. recently has become involved in legal entanglements and there has been much publicity regarding its predicament.

Mr. Cafritz, it is set forth, built the apartment house and guaranteed the bonds issued under the mortgage. It also is charged that Mr. Cafritz has been forced to expend $100,000 in order to protect the property.

New York, Jan. 13 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Books and records of the F. H. Smith Co., which have been sought by the Federal authorities for use in an investigation of the firm's activities, were produced before the Federal grand jury today in response to subpenas issued at the request of Nugent Dodds, Special Assistant Attorney General.

Mr. Dodds is seeking indictments against eight directors of the company charging use of the mails in a scheme to defraud. The representatives of the company, who brought the books to the Federal Building were not questioned before the grand jury.

Representative Melvin J. Maas, of Minnesota, in the principal address of the meeting, called attention to a flight of 14,000 miles, which he recently completed in the interest of Army housing. He said that on the trip he found that the public is beginning to accept airplane accidents in the same spirit with which they regard rail and automobile crashes.

An actor—in the true sense of the word—as well as a playwright, George M. Cohan steps forth in the central role of his own play, "Gambling," in the National and comes close to contributing the perfect evening to the theater.

So long since there was such enthusiasm on Pater Noster Row, some of the old-timers who saw Georgie Cohan in the musical comedies, y'ars and y'ars ago, almost broke down last night and wept; not because there are silver threads among the whilom gold, or because pathos and bathos struggle the one with the other, but because Mr. Cohan's histrionic ability has seldom been displayed down here on the banks of the Potomac. The tears were for the very joy of it all. You see, the old-timers had always looked upon George M. Cohan as strictly a song-and-dance man. They marveled seeing him steal the laurels hitherto placed only on the brows of such stalwarts as * * *; but why mention names? The fact is George M. Cohan is a character actor in "Gambling" Mr. Cohan deals with types he knows; and therein, of course, is the secret of his success—as playwright, actor, and director. Though Sam Forrest staged this play, the fine Italian hand of Cohan is discovered all through, especially in direction. The man has a genius for theater.

When it is recorded here that a first night capacity audience actually stood for several minutes and applauded after the curtain dropped on the last act, begging and pleading for a speech—which he refrained from doing—some measure of the play's gripping intensity and the popularity of the author may be imagined. The story has to do with an old gambler, his love and devotion for the daughter of his old pal—shot to the death. Draper—played with infinite skill by Mr. Cohan—has seen the girl through from babyhood. On the threshold of womanhood she runs away with the scion of a wealthy family—and then follows her mysterious death. How the motive that prompted this act is finally trailed down makes one of the finest mysteries of the season.

All the atmosphere of that portion of New York frequented by card sharks and their lady loves is aptly portrayed, and in the bringing of this to the stage there comes with it a character study out of the ordinary. This is the woman of the world played by Miss Mary Philips—a rowdy-dowdy gal of hard-boiled tendencies. The by-play, the pitch and toss, between the Draper of Mr. Cohan and the Mazie of Miss Philips is something to excite keen enjoyment; for here is a young actress who drags out all the hidden gems in a character on a par with some of the celebrated gangster women exploited in fiction and on the stage.

While these two are the outstanding reasons for all the interest in "Gambling," Mr. Cohan and Miss Philips are playing in the midst of what might be termed a luxurious cast and settings—and an evening with them all is something to remember.

Briefly, it is the thesis that there are circumstances in which a hard-working husband, whose family has come to regard him as a necessary nuisance to sign checks, is entirely justified in telling them all to go roll their respective hoops and going away with some one he enjoys. In the play, of course, the theory is that he is in love with the person with whom he goes away, but that is just a bit of theatrical license. He really leaves because he has become thoroughly wearied of his eternal role of digging up cash with which to finance the follies of a gigolo-fascinated wife and a family of insufficiently spanked offspring.

The mechanics employed in working out the plot border on the realm of things from which dreams are spun. But they do not seem so improbable when presented by Miss Cowl, ably seconded by Guy Standing. The idea that an experienced lawyer accustomed to earning fees with three figures before the decimal, could be lured to a lonely fishing shack in the Canadian woods so easily as Mr. Standing is by Miss Cowl, is a bit too thick when reduced to cold type. Perhaps, also, it is even more improbable that he would make such heroic efforts to escape after he found that he had been trapped. But both improbabilities seem logical in this particular offering. Anyway, the piece is supposed to be a comedy.

There is plenty of comedy but one is led to suspect that the authors also set out to point the immoral moral heretofore mentioned. The theory can be summarized to the general effect that if the up and whoopee-making generation just going through the pocket flask and petting age, plans to reverse all accepted standards of conduct with respect to its parents, then it should not be surprised if the parents occasionally violate some of the conventional traditions as to parental devotion to their offspring. It might be added that what applies to the youngsters also goes for women who conceive themselves to be capable of amorous adventures with stray Russian princes at an age when they could more profitably be playing with their grandchildren.

Aside from the two principals who bring to their roles the perfection of long experience and demonstrated ability, there are two unusually good bits of character acting. One is the work of Lewis Martin in the role of the interior decorator, alias official tame cat for the misguided matron. The other is Helen Brooks' rendition of the character of the gin-soaked flapper who has never been properly introduced to the business side of the family hairbrush.

Altogether "Jenny" seems to have deserved at least all of the success it has had on Broadway and it is well worth an evening of any busy Washingtonian. It is even funnier than the Senate and more replete with wisdom.

The moral of this piece is one that would be considered very immoral when judged by conventional standards; but, somehow, it seems quite proper when explained by Miss Cowl.

The attack occurred near the center of Reidsville, within 300 yards of the knitting mill where the girl had started to work.

She was struck on the head, knocked unconscious and dragged to a vacant lot where she was found in an almost delirious condition some time later by other girls who were going to work.

his love affair with Naomi Hall, about her expected motherhood and about his secret marriage to her. They quoted him as saying further that Leroy asked him where his bride lived, and then, on the day that the bomb was sent to the Hall family, took him on a duck hunting trip.

Washington Clew Fades.

If anything new has been developed since then, nothing has been said about it by the authorities. A report that a Washington man knew something about the manufacture of the bomb was exploded yesterday, when County Officer Frank Prince said that he had interviewed the man and had convinced himself that he had no such information.

The $1,000 bond for Herman Brady was put up yesterday by his mother, Mrs. Ella R. Brady, and his brotheer, Emmett, and was secured by the Brady farm at Mitchellville, Md.

Leaving the jail, Herman said he was going home to get something to eat. The jail fare, he said, did not agree with him.

Alleged Rum Package Is Seized After Chase

Failing in two attempts to rid himself of a package containing 2 quarts of alleged liquor, William Howard, colored, 39 years old, who described himself as janitor at a California avenue apartment house, near Eighteenth street northwest, was arrested in a short chase on Seaton street, near Seventeenth street northwest, last night by Policeman S. M. Scott.

Howard was charged with transportation and possession. The policeman said he was patrolling his beat when Howard upon sighting him stepped to the curb and, opening the door of a car, attempted to toss the package inside. A woman occupant of the auto became frightened at his action, and Howard turned and raced a block, when he was caught by the policeman, who said Howard was endeavoring to throw the package over a fence.

ITALY WILL DEMAND PARITY WITH FRANCE

Fascist Bulletin Says Even Parley Failure Would Not Alter Claim.

REACTION IS POWERFUL

Rome, Jan. 13 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Italy is so determined to "maintain integrally" her right to naval parity with France that she will remain "perfectly tranquil" if that demand should "sink the little bark of the London argonauts seeking peace," Foglio D'Ordini, official bulletin of the Fascist party, asserts today in a vigorous editorial foreshadowing Italian naval policies at the five-power naval parley.

In the same aggressive tone the writer of the article, headed "Ships and the Sea," adds that "it is solely because of her modest financial possibilities that Italy renounces sustaining her right to naval parity with England."

The grounds for Italy's demand for naval parity with France and her right in principle, to parity with "the strongest naval power in the world," is set forth in the following paragraph in the Fascist order sheet:

Text of Communication.

"It is our sincere wish that agreement can be reached. But we can not hide the grave difficulties to be overcome. One of them is the quest of naval parity with France, acquired at the Washington conference with respect to battleships.

"It is impossible for us to renounce this, absolutely impossible. Whether parity is made higher or lower or at an actual level of the present has no importance. The essential is that the right to parity be preserved also in the new protocol which will, or should, conclude the work of the London conference.

"Italy not only integrally maintains her right to naval parity with France, but in principle upholds the idea of parity even with the strongest navies in the world. It is only her modest financial possibilities which cause Italy to renounce the right to naval parity with England."

Italy's Position Cited.

"The life of a nation of 42,000,000 inhabitants depends upon the Straits of Gibraltar, a few kilometers wide, easily blockaded with a small force, across which Italy communicates with the Western world.

"For France the Mediterranean problem is one of security of transport of colored troops (from Morocco) to the mainland. For Italy it is a problem of the life and death of the whole nation.

"France can navigate in the North Sea, the Atlantic and the Mediterranean; Italy in the Mediterranean only.

Hint of Parley Failure.

"Perhaps the rock of Franco-Italian parity will sink the little bark of the London Argonauts who seek after peace. Such an eventuality—for such a reason—leaves us perfectly tranquil."

These utterances, especially the sentence last quoted, have created an erroneous impression here. It is realized that Mussolini has instructed Foreign Minister Dino Garandi, head of the Italian delegation to the London conference, not to budge an inch from Italy's oft-repeated demand for naval parity with France.

The opinion here is that upon France would rest the responsibility for a breakdown of the London negotiations and that Italy would not be just to her own needs did she give way in order to avert a failure.

U. S. Officers Kill Man in Rum Truck

Gun Fight, Begun When Halt Signal Is Ignored, Ends Fatally.

Brownsville, Tex., Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Juan Gomez, of Harlingen, Tex., who was riding on a motor truck loaded with liquor, was shot and killed today in a gun fight with Federal officers near Los Indios, close to the Mexican border, when the truck was not stopped at the command of customs inspectors. The driver of the truck escaped into the dense brush.

Four officers were guarding the river road when they heard the truck approaching it. A stop sign was stretched across the road.

Before reaching the sign the truck swerved and ran through a fence to the left of the road. Shots were exchanged and Gomez fell from the seat with bullet wounds in the neck and chest. Leaping from the truck the driver raced for cover, firing his rifle as he ran.

In Gomez's pistol two empty shells were found.

Mrs. Karr was born in Monticello, Ind., but came to Washington after her marriage to Mr. Karr, who died on March 20 last. Mr. Coleman was born in Portamouth, Va., the son of Henry M. and Ella Outland Coleman.

of the League of Nations, the Pacific four-power agreement, the Locarno pact, the optional clause and the pact of Paris.

"The outstanding fact is that Great Britain and the United States are virtually in agreement beforehand as to the joint task of limiting naval armaments," declares the Daily News.

"That fact alone should make it impossible for the conference to end in another dangerous fiasco.

French Cooperation Sought.

"But let us not blind ourselves to the certainty that our highest expectations will not be realized without prolonged negotiations and the exercise of statesmanship of the first order. It may be taken for granted submarines will not be abolished this year at one stroke, but it should be possible to find a formula which will induce France to agree to limitation."

The Manchester Guardian remarks that the French memorandum seemed to argue that unless disarmament could be tackled as a whole, on the land and sea, it could not be tackled at all.

"That is an untenable doctrine," the Guardian says. "The British note says the government will make proposals involving very considerable reduction in all categories. That at present is most hopeful, and it is the only practicable method."

Paris Pact Discussed.

Critics of A. V. Alexander, first lord of the admiralty, have said that the Pact of Paris is not an instrument of security. In reply to them the Daily Chronicle declares: "It is the bounden duty of all honest signatories to make it into an instrument of security, and the only way to do that is to act on the principle that it is not a mere scrap of paper and that the principle has been strong enough to bring the United States and Great Britain into line."

The Yorkshire Post, acknowledging that the British government can only argue that the best approach to an ideal of general disarmament is to be made by attacking the problem in general, says: "Great Britain, in truth, is hoping for almost as much from the psychological effects of the conference as from the actual results.

"The value of the Kellogg-Briand pact may be summed up as a definite statement of a point of view which has grown up between two nations."

French Pleased at Reply.

Paris, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Official French circles after closer study tonight expressed pleasure at the tenor of the British reply to the French naval memorandum of December.

On the other hand, it was felt in Paris that the Italian insistence on naval parity with France as a basis of all negotiations throws a somewhat hazy picture on the otherwise bright London naval screen.

It was understood here that Secretary of State Stimson plans to talk with Premier Tardieu in London on Saturday. The premier is due here tomorrow to meet with parliament and probably will find it necessary to be at The Hague on Friday to sign the expected reparations agreement.

13 Arctic Planes Reach Great Falls

Army Test Fliers Land at Montana Town on Way to Spokane.

Great Falls, Mont., Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Thirteen airplanes, members of the Army Arctic flight from Selfridge Field to Spokane, swept down out of a wintry sky here late today to spend the night at the municipal airport.

Engine trouble forced First Lieut. M. L. Elliott's ship to earth on the Hosey ranch, east of Fort Benton. Two other planes landed with him and learning that he would not encounter lengthy delay, proceeded toward this city.

The two lagging transport planes which left Minot, N. Dak., this morning still were unreported. No fear for their safety was expressed.

"Cold and uneventful," was the terse discussion of his day's journey by Maj. Ralph Royce, commander of the flight.

Ralph B. Fleharty Ends Service in Utility Body

LIEUTENANT'S TRIAL FOR THEFT GOES ON

Naval Court-Martial Told Examination Showed Musil Is Sane.

HUGE SUM RECOVERED

Trial of Lieut. Charles Musil, Navy paymaster, on a charge of absconding with $54,651.21 in pay-roll funds, will be resumed today before the special general court-martial at the Washington Navy Yard.

It was brought out at the court-martial yesterday that the entire amount had been recovered, and Lieut. Arthur P. Spencer, defense counsel, advised the court that Lieut. Musil had not embezzled the money nor converted it to his own use.

Lieut. Miller V. Parsons, of the Marine Corps, judge advocate of the court conducting the prosecution, yesterday offered a medical report in evidence, holding that an exhaustive examination had failed to disclose any trace of mental abnormality in Lieut. Musil and had established him as mentally sound and fit for duty. After consultation, the court then ordered the trial to proceed.

The charges upon which the officer is being tried developed out of his alleged embezzlement of the money while he was disbursing officer of division 40 of the destroyer squadrons scouting fleet, attached to the U. S. S. Gilmer. After having been absent without leave for several days, according to the charges, Lieut. Musil surrendered at the New York Navy Yard and was returned to Washington, where he led a party of naval officers to a point near Blue Plains, where $40,000 of the money was found buried.

Annapolis Patients Better.

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 13.—That the three Annapolis residents affected by "parrot fever," or psittacosis, have passed the crisis in their illness, was the statement made today by Dr. J. Wily Martin, their attending physician. The patients, who have been ill more than ten days, are Mr. and Mrs. Lee W. Kalmey, and Mrs. Simon S. Martin, wife of the secretary of Annapolis Chamber of Commerce, mother of Mrs. Kalmey. Mrs. Martin was afflicted to a less severe degree than her son-in-law and daughter.

Dr. Martin now looks for their early recovery.

Belief that the "parrot fever" is not as uncommon as at first represented was advanced by Dr. Martin in recalling a patient whom he treated a year ago. The symptoms of whose illness were much the same as that of the present cases. A local woman, whose name was withheld, was stricken during the Christmas season of 1928, was critically ill for six weeks, but finally recovered.

The physician said it was this case that aided him in diagnosing the illness of the Kalmey's and Mrs. Martin. Circumstances attending the year-old case were virtually identical, Dr. Martin said. The woman purchased a parrot at the same pet shop in North Eutaw street, Baltimore. The bird died in a short time, and, a week later, the woman was stricken.

Ohio Girl in Serious Condition.

Warren, Ohio, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Miss Clody McEntire, one of three persons ill here with a disease diagnosed as parrot fever, was in a serious condition today, having developed bronchial pneumonia, the attending physician said.

The girl's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. W. McEntire, also suffering from parrott fever, were said to be considerably improved today.

New York, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—The two New York pet shops from which the parrots believed to have communicated psittacosis to Baltimore residents were shipped also sent shipments to Hartford, Conn.; Portland, Me.; Detroit, Mich., and Centralia, Pa., the department of health announced today.

Four new cases were reported in New York City today, two in Youngstown, Ohio, and two in Yonkers.

Six Miners Killed By Gas Explosion

Only Other Man in Deep Shaft Removed in Critical Condition.

Birmingham, Ala., Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Six men were killed late today in a gas explosion in the Peerless-Cahaba Coal Company's mine at Straven, about 40 miles from here. At least one man was injured.

The dead: Arthur Lawley, Coleman Davis, Chalon Brantley, and Bob Vernon, all white miners; Bill Lanier, Negro, and a Negro named Coleman.

Jim Chesser, the seventh miner in the shaft, was sent to a Birmingham hospital in a critical condition.

The explosion occurred in what is known as the eighth right seam, 1,000 feet below the entrance to the mine. At least fourteen other men and possibly a number of others had left the shaft an hour before the explosion occurred, officials said.

W. B. Hillhouse, State mine inspector, with a rescue party of more than a dozen men, was at the mine within two hours.

Interment will follow at Arlington National Cemetery. Full military honors will be accorded the naval commander, and members of the scientific staff of the Naval Observatory, to which he was attached at retirement, will act as honorary pallbearers.

CAR DEALERS URGED TO IMPROVE SERVICE

Courtesy and Tact Great Essentials, Association Is Told.

NEW LEADER PRESIDES

Development and maintenance of higher standards in the service division of the automobile business was urged upon local dealers last night by George Brosch, of the Motor Equipment Association. Mr. Brosch addressed the Washington Automotive Trade Association at the Racquet Club.

The speaker emphasized the strong need for educating service managers and others in the service department who meet the public to an understanding of the value of courtesy, tact, quiet efficiency, and a pleasant approach. In Mr. Brosch's estimation, dealers must insist upon these factors with especial force during 1930.

Mr. Brosch also told the local dealers of the rapid growth of super-service stations, particularly on the West Coast. Such stations, he pointed out, make everything as convenient as is humanly possible for the motorist, and perform more than 25 services under a single roof. One such chain, he said, gives emergency service within a radius of 25 miles, making no charge for the trip out. All dealers, Mr. Brosch declared, can get a portion of the business that such stations are gaining by improving their own methods.

Arrangements were made by the Washington Automotive Trade Association for Mr. Brosch to address members' service managers at a special meeting next Tuesday night.

The retiring president of the W. A. T. A., Edward M. Wallace, last night turned over the gavel of office to the new incumbent, Whitney Leary, who presided over his first meeting.

Rudolph Jose, chairman of the show committee, announced that all plans have been completed for the annual automobile display, which opens at the Washington Auditorium January 25. A final report was submitted on behalf of the banquet committee by C. H. Warrington, chairman.

Included in the graduates, who were from classes ranging from '81 to '27, were Representative and Mrs. Elbert S. Brigham, of St. Albans, Vt.; George Wales, of the Civil Service Commission, and W. W. Husband, Second Assistant Secretary of Labor. Mrs. John R. Duffield sang old college songs, and John Scofield acted as toastmaster.

The need of sidewalks on Fifteenth street between Emerson and Decatur streets, and on Thirteenth street between Decatur and Farragut streets was called to the attention of the District Commissioners in a resolution adopted by the Piney Branch Citizens Association meeting at the Hamline Methodist Church, Sixteenth and Allison streets northwest, last night.

After a discussion of recent automobile accidents at the John Dickson Home, the association also authorized the appointment of a committee to confer with officials of the home with a view to correcting the hazardous conditions of its east-west driveway and the possibility of clos-

Mrs. Adria C. Beaver, yesterday lost her suit for $5,000, growing out of a tea-spilling incident, February 25, 1927. Mrs. Beaver sought to collect the sum from Clara L. Free, president of the Maryland Tobacco Plantations, Inc., claiming that the defendant had spilled tea on her during a two-party collision in the Transportation Building.

The suit went on trial last week, but was not concluded until yesterday. The jury was out only a short time. The plaintiff claimed that she was burned severely on her arm by the hot liquid and that her beauty had been impaired. She also insisted that as a result of the accident she never again would be able to wear an evening gown.

CRIME COMMISSION URGES UNIFIED DRY LAW ENFORCEMENT

CRIME BOARD'S REPORT CITES LACK OF FACTS

Few Figures Available on Which to Base Proposals.

LEGAL DIFFICULTIES OF ENFORCEMENT HIT

Careful Study Is Urged for Permit-Granting Work of Treasury.

(Associated Press.)

The following is the text of the preliminary report on the observance and enforcement of prohibition of the National Commission on Law Enforcement and Observance:

Ever since the organization of this commission on May 28, 1929, it has been giving careful consideration, among other things, to the question of the observance and enforcement of the eighteenth amendment and the national prohibition act. The problems presented have been numerous and difficult. It was urged upon us from certain sources that we proceed at once to hold public hearings on this subject, but we conceived it to be more useful to make a careful study of the whole question, securing information from the responsible officers of Government and from printed reports, as well as from hearings before committees of Congress, before embarking upon public hearings. While we are not ready to make a final report on the subject, we have reached certain conclusions which we are transmitting to you with this communication. The extent and complexity of the problem perhaps may be strikingly presented by reference to a few outstanding facts.

Scope and Size of the Problem.

As to observance: It is impossible wholly to set off observance of the prohibition act from the large question of the views and habits of the American people with respect to private judgment as to statutes and regulations affecting their conduct. To reach conclusions of any value, we must go into deep questions of public opinion and the criminal law. We must look into the several factors in the attitude of the people, both generally and in particular localities, toward laws in general and toward specific regulations. We must note the attitude of the pioneer toward such things. We must bear in mind the Puritan's objection to administration, the Whig tradition of a "right of revolution," the conception of natural rights, classical in our policy, the democratic tradition of individual participation in sovereignty, the attitude of the business world toward legal regulation of enterprise, the clash of organized interests and opinions in a diversified community, and the divergences of attitude in different sections of the country and as between different groups in the same locality. We must not forget the many historical examples of large-scale public disregard of laws in our past. To give proper weight to these things, in connection with the social and economic effects of the prohibition law, is not a matter of a few months.

No Reliable Figures.

As to enforcement, there are no reliable figures to show the size of the problem. But the reported arrest in the last fiscal year of upward of 80,000 persons from every part of continental United States indicates a staggering number of what might be called focal points of infection. To these must be added the points of possible contact from without, along 5,700 miles of land boundaries, substantially 3,000 miles of frontage on the great lakes and connecting rivers (excluding Lake Michigan), and almost 12,000 miles of Atlantic, Gulf and Pacific shore line. Thus, there are about 18,700 miles of mainland of the continental United States at every point of which infection is possible.

There are no satisfactory estimates of the number of roads into the United States from Mexico and Canada. The number of smuggling roads from Canada is reported as at least 1,000, and on the Mexican border there are entrances into the United States at most points along a boundary of 1,744 miles.

Portion of Personnel Drawn On.

To deal with an enforcement problem of this size and spread, the Federal Government can draw only on a portion of the personnel of three Federal services, whose staffs aggregate about 23,000. Approximately one-tenth of this number is in the investigative section of the prohibition unit. Of the remaining 20,000 only a small proportion of the personnel is available for actual preventive and investigative work. The remainder is engaged in work far different from prohibition.

These figures speak for themselves.

Administrative Difficulties.

A frequent complaint is that the Federal Government is prosecuting small cases and not getting at those responsible for the large supplies of illegal liquor. To get at the smugglers, the wholesale distributors and those who manufacture and divert on a large scale, it is necessary to have either an integration of the forces working at the supply and distribution ends, or a close working relation between the two forces. With respect to both liquor and narcotics, it is frequently stated by enforcement officials and those who study phases of the problem that the Federal officials who deal with local or retail distribution upset many an investigation which might lead to the sources of supply; and on the other hand, investigators who are dealing with sources are frequently ineffectual in getting at persons who control the sources.

To adjust the machinery of Federal administration, as it had grown up for other purposes, to this huge problem of enforcement of prohibition, is not easy, and will require much further study. Unification, centralization of responsibility and means of insuring cooperation between Federal and State agencies, are things to which we must come, quite apart from the exigencies of enforcement of prohibition, but which can not be achieved overnight.

Legal Difficulties, Remedies.

When we come to the legal difficulties in enforcement, it is possible to speak with much more assurance as to what may be done at once by way of improvement.

Pending study of the whole subject, there are certain features of Federal enforcement of the law as it stands with respect to which the testimony of judges, district attorneys and enforcement officers is general and substantially unanimous.

If on no other grounds than to give the law a fair trial, there are obvious and uncontroverted difficulties, abundantly pointed out by experience, which may, and, as we think, should be met so as to make enforcement more effective.

Reason for Difficulty.

Summarily stated, these difficulties are due to (1) the division of enforcement between the Treasury Department and the Department of Justice, (2) the disordered condition of Federal legislation involved in enforcement, (3) the possibilities of evading or defeating injunction proceedings, commonly known as padlock injunctions, by means of transfers and concealments of persons interested in property used for manufacture and sale of illicit liquor, and (4) the congestion of petty prosecutions in the Federal court, requiring great delays, interfering seriously with general business, and leading to wholesale disposition of accumulated causes under circumstances impairing the dignity of and injuring respect for those tribunals.

Without prejudice to any ultimate conclusions, we think that in the interest of promoting observance of and respect for law, the national prohibition law may well be strengthened and its effectiveness increased in these important particulars.

(a) Transfer of investigation and preparation of cases to the Department of Justice.

Task of Courts.

There is very general agreement among those who have had to do with enforcement of prohibition that the whole task of enforcement through the courts, as distinguished from the granting of permits and administration of regulations as to the legitimate use of alcohol or of liquors, should be concentrated in the Department of Justice.

It is an anomaly that the cases are investigated and prepared by agencies entirely disconnected with and not answerable to those which are to prosecute them. All experience of administration shows the importance of concentration rather than diffusion of responsibility. If prosecution, the legal side of enforcement, is partitioned between two distinct agencies, the diffused, ill-defined, nonlocated responsibility is sure in the long run to be an obstacle to efficiency. No doubt in certain special situations, where technical knowledge of a special type is involved and where the number of prosecutions each year is very small, it is consistent with a high degree of efficiency to have these few cases investigated and prepared by some body of experienced men in some other department and turned over to the Department of Justice for trial.

But where the volume is so enormous and the circumstances are so varied as in liquor prosecutions, this is not expedient. To dispose of such a mass of cases satisfactorily there must be a well-organized coordination of investigation and prosecution, which can only function effectively when under a single head, with responsibility definitely placed, so that there can be no falling down between two distinct bureaus and no lapsing at either point into a perfunctory routine.

Calls for Special Study.

There must be careful study of how to separate the permit-granting work of the Treasury Department, which belongs there, from the work of investigation and prosecution, which should all be done in the Department of Justice. But the principle of transfer of the latter to the Department of Justice is, we think, clear.

(b) Codification of Federal legislation applicable to enforcement of prohibition.

Enforcement of prohibition involves resort to more than 25 statutes, enacted at various times during 40 years, many of them much antedating the eighteenth amendment.

As they stand, they are in form disconnected, unwieldy and in much need of coordination and adjustment to each other. It has been urged upon us, from many parts of the country, by those charged with administering them, and we find it true on examining them, that they are much in need of being put in order, revised and simplified.

We recommend that all Federal legislation applicable to the enforcement of prohibition be revised and digested with a view of making it a unified whole in the form of a simpler, better ordered and hence more workable code. In our judgment, this will make for much greater efficiency.

As things are, it is sometimes far from easy for those charged with enforcement to find all the law bearing on their powers. Such things are all to the advantage of the commercialized law-breaker who commands excellent advice on points which, at the crisis of action, the enforcement officer may have to look up hurriedly for himself. We recommend a codification of the laws on this subject as an important step toward better enforcement.

Making Padlock Effective.

(c) Provision for making so-called padlock injunctions more effective.

Long before the national prohibition act it had been found that the jurisdiction of courts of equity to abate nuisances could be made a most effective way of dealing with many forms of vice. Nearly two generations ago this jurisdiction was applied to violations of State liquor laws, and it was later applied with good results to violations of laws against prostitution. The national prohibition law took advantage of this experience and provided for injunctions in causes where property was habitually used in connection with violations of that law. These provisions are well conceived and are capable of doing much toward making the law effective in action. But means of evading them have been discovered in certain limitations of procedure growing out of the need of serving process upon the persons interested in the property, by conveying some small fraction of the title to a nonresident, or by resident owners, landlords or tenants concealing themselves and evading the service of process, such proceedings are increasingly rendered nugatory. We are advised that open, persistent and extensive violators of the law have been enabled to escape so-called padlocking of their property in this way.

Amendment Is Advised.

We think this grave defect may be met by a simple amendment adding to Section 22, Title II, of the national prohibition law a provision that if in a proceeding under that section it is made to appear to the court that any person unknown has or claims an interest in the property or some part of it, which would be affected by the order prayed for, it may order that such person be made a party by designating him as unknown owner or claimant of some interest in the property described. It should go on to provide that such person and any defendant who is absent from the jurisdiction or whom, whether within or without the jurisdiction, it is impracticable to serve otherwise, or who is shown to the satisfaction of the court to be concealing himself for the purpose of evading service of process or of any order of the court, may be served in accordance with the provisions of section 57 of the judicial code.

The use of injunction proceedings as a means of enforcement is so important that this provision for reaching unknown claimants, nonresidents and residents who conceal themselves to evade service of process would add very greatly to the efficacy of the statute. It contains nothing which is not already done in the States generally when private claims to property are concerned.

Congestion in Courts.

(d) Provisions for relieving congestion in the Federal courts.

From various parts of the country come complaints of congestion of the Federal courts due to the large volume of petty prosecutions under the national prohibition act. Obviously, these prosecutions must go on. It would not do to create an impression that minor infractions are to be ignored. As things are, however, the congestion of prosecutions in the Federal courts for minor infractions, caused by the necessity of proceeding by indictment in all cases, except for maintenance of a nuisance or for unlawful possession, is a serious handicap to dealing vigorously with major infractions and makes handling of the minor infractions perfunctory. It has done much to create a feeling in some localities that the law can not be enforced. In our opinion, the delays and opportunities for escape from punishment thus occasioned may be and should be obviated.

Increase Number of Judges.

Three methods to this end have been suggested: First, to increase the number of Federal judges; second, to create inferior Federal courts, or, as it has been put, Federal police courts, for such cases; and, third, to utilize the present machinery of the courts, meeting the causes of delay and congestion by a simpler procedure for petty cases.

There are constitutional questions to be considered in connection with both the second and the third of these proposals. The first does not involve any constitutional difficulties. But it leaves the cumbersome procedure by indictment, wholly inappropriate to minor infractions, in full force and multiplies the apparatus designed for great cases in order to deal with small ones. The objections to this method are palpable, and it should not be adopted if the situation may be met in some other way. So with the second. It involves some of the constitutional questions which must give us pause in connection with the third. But, what is more to be thought of, there are serious objections to multiplying courts. If it is possible to deal with this matter adequately with the existing machinery of the Federal system, it should be done. We think such a solution entirely possible and in the right line of progress, not merely in the enforcement of the national prohibition act, but of all Federal legislation.

Infamous Crimes Defined.

Under the fifth amendment no one shall be held to answer for a capital or other infamous crime unless on a presentment or indictment of a grand jury. As construed by the Supreme Court, "infamous crime" means one punishable by imprisonment in a penitentiary, or for more than one year, or for any period if at hard labor. Hence, where imprisonment is to be in jail, is not to exceed six months, and is not to be at hard labor, the crime is not infamous. It is only where there is a possibility of imprisonment in the penitentiary, or for more than a year, or at hard labor, that an indictment is required.

The Jones law has expressly recognized a class of "casual or slight violations." A statute providing that in prosecutions under Title II of the national prohibition law the district attorney may, in case of "casual or slight violations," prosecute by complaint or information, and in such cases, when so prosecuted, the penalty for each offense should be a fine not to exceed $500 or imprisonment in jail without hard labor, not to exceed six months, or both, would obviate the long delay, unnecessary expense and needless keeping in session of grand juries, which are demanded by the present state of the law.

Asks Definition by Congress.

We think, also, that it would be expedient for Congress to define the term "casual or slight violations." Speedy convictions and certain imposition of penalties are important considerations, and are more likely to be efficacious than threats of severe punishment rendered nugatory by congested dockets overpassing any possibilities of trial in the manner constitutionally appointed for crimes of such magnitude. But this suggestion, made on general considerations applicable to all criminal laws, and out of abundant caution, may not be a vital part of the plan.

Next, to simplify the mode of prosecution of petty cases, we must consider the matter of pleas of guilty and of trials. As the law is, every offender must be indicted, must await indictment before he can plead guilty, even if ready to do so at once, and his case must, if he pleads not guilty, await its turn on the calendar, constructing, if it is a petty case, the disposition of important cases. The mere accumulated number of these petty prosecutions awaiting trial has become a source of embarrassment in many Federal courts.

Section 3 of Article III of the Constitution requires trial of all "crimes" to be by jury. The sixth amendment provides that "in all criminal prosecutions the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial by an impartial jury of the State and district wherein the crime shall have been committed." It has been held that "crimes" in this connection does not refer to petty offences.

Provisions for Hearings.

In view of the general holding of State courts on analogous provisions and of the concessions and distinctions made by the Supreme Court of the United States in the leading case of Callen V. Wilson, 127 U. S., 540, 555, 557, we think it is possible to provide for a hearing in the United States District Court before a magistrate, provided trial by jury in that court is preserved to the accused. But we see no need of setting up special Federal magistrates. It would seem entirely feasible to make use of the existing system of United States commissioners.

It could be provided that in case the accused, prosecuted by complaint or information, pleads guilty, such plea may be reported by the commissioner to the court and judgment of conviction rendered and sentence imposed by the court. Then it could be provided that in case the accused so prosecuted pleads not guilty to the court, there shall be a hearing before the commissioner, who shall report to the court, and if the court on examination of its findings render judgment of acquital or conviction as the case may be, and in case of conviction is recommended by the commissioner, the accused may within three days after filing of the commissioner's report, except in writing to the report and demand trial by jury. Finally, it could be provided that in such case the district attorney may elect whether to go to trial on the complaint or information, or to submit the case to the grand jury, and that in case the grand jury indicts the case shall then proceed upon the indictment.

Two Actions of Jones Law.

The Jones law was enacted to make enforcement more efficacious in two ways: (a) By providing for more severe penalties in the discretion of the court; (b) by making available the collateral consequences of a felony, such, for example, as the rules of law applicable to prevention of a felony and the capture of felons. This was done by making every violation of the national prohibition act a potential felony.

The foregoing suggestions aim at preserving this feature of the existing law. Up to the time when the district attorney elects how to prosecute there is a potential felony. In other words, all the possibilities in the way of arrest and prevention which obtain under the existing law are conserved. But the intention is to make it possible in case of "casual or slight violations" (language of the Jones law) to prosecute as a petty offence, thus relieving congestion in the Federal courts, maintaining the dignity of those tribunals and making possible speedy disposition. As things are now, the cumbersome process of indictment must be resorted to even in the most petty case. The result is that large numbers of these cases pile up and have to be disposed of offhand by "bargain day" and similar unseemly processes.

Judge Will Still Have Discretion.

In any case which the district attorney elects to prosecute by indictment the judge will still have the discretion provided for in the existing law. If it is objected that a wide discretion is put in the district attorney by the proposed legislation, the answer is that he has that discretion already in effect, simply exercising it, not in the beginning by the mode in which he prosecutes, but later by including any particular prosecution in the wholesale disposition on some bargain day.

Thus, a few simple legislative enactments, in our opinion, could be made greatly to strengthen enforcement of the national prohibition law. Such measures, making it more adequate to its purposes, are suggested by study of material which has come to us from all agencies concerned with its administration. We think they could not in any wise interfere with any ultimate program which we may have to recommend, and would in the meantime advance observance of the law.

Respectfully for the commission,
GEO. W. WICKERSHAM,
Chairman.

New Border Patrol Proposed by Mellon

Unified Service Urged in Coast Guard Work at Boundaries.

Would Permit Entry to U. S. at Designated Places Only.

SECRETARY MELLON.

Following is the report of Secretary Mellon to President Hoover as submitted to Congress:

Mr. President: The Treasury has been considering for some time the creation of a unified border patrol, in order that the execution of the customs, immigration, prohibition, and other laws regulating or prohibiting the entry into the United States of persons and merchandise, may be made more effective. The following recommendations are submitted for your consideration and transmission to the Congress if you approved:

(1) The entry into the United States of all persons should be prohibited except at points of entry designated by the President.

(2) The present number of points of entry should be increased sufficiently to permit uninterrupted and unhampered intercourse with our neighboring countries over established and customary routes.

(3) A unified border patrol should be created to patrol the border and prevent illegal entry.

(4) The unified border patrol should be a part of the Coast Guard.

A specific statutory prohibition of entry into the United States of either aliens or citizens, in any manner and with or without merchandise, except at designated points, is essential as a basis if the border patrol is to function efficiently, since it will give the patrol a plain and simple rule to enforce, and relieve them of any necessity of interpreting and applying the customs, immigration, and other laws. Customs, immigration, quarantine, and other officers will be stationed at the designated points of entry and the administration of the laws at these points should remain, of course, under the jurisdiction of the present services.

The points of entry should be designated by the President, just as ports of entry are now designated. They should be established at the boundary intersection of all established and customary routes and wherever intercourse with our neighboring countries justifies. Flexibility is essential in order to permit an increase in the points of entry conformably with the growth of commerce and travel, and in order to meet seasonal necessities and constantly changing conditions. There should be a substantial increase, rather than a decrease in the present number of customs and immigration stations.

It is believed that the proposed plan will promote materially the convenience of the traveling public, as well as relieve those traveling on inland highways from inspection. Today, generally speaking, travelers may enter the United States anywhere, but must report at a custom house, which may well be entirely out of their line of travel, and declare and enter their merchandise. Moreover, our present patrol must necessarily be maintained on interior roads and not along the border, with the consequent necessity of stopping vehicles and pedestrians who may never have left the country. Adequate provision should, of course, be made by regulation so as to meet the needs of farmers and others whose property extends across the border or who are living along the border.

The unified border patrol should be charged with the enforcement of the statutory prohibition—that is, it should be charged with the duty of guarding the border between the designated points and preventing entry of all persons and merchandise, over the land and water boards, except at the points of entry specified, where the usual customs, immigration, quarantine, and other officers will be stationed. The proposed unified border patrol will replace the patrols now maintained by both the customs service and the immigration service on our Mexican and Canadian boundaries, and will cover the same territory as those patrols, thus complementing the work of the Coast Guard on the maritime boundaries, eliminating duplication of effort, concentrating responsibility for the protection of all our borders, and bringing about a more effective coordination of the work.

Preliminary surveys have established the practicability of the plan. An annual physical examination of our entire border, however, will be necessary prior to the final designation of points of entry or the closing of trails and untraveled roads. The work must be done in harmonious cooperation with our neighboring countries, and their consent obtained as a matter of courtesy. It is believed that at least six months will be required before the new border patrol can be organized and the preliminary work completed.

The cost of maintaining the unified border patrol will exceed the present cost of maintaining our customs and immigration patrols, and additional immigration and customs stations will be required. Surveys upon which estimates of the increased costs can be based are under way and should soon be completed.

Very sincerely,
A. W. MELLON,
Secretary of the Treasury.

Text of President's Message

President Hoover in transmitting the first preliminary report of the Law Enforcement Commission to Congress yesterday, said:

To the Congress of the United States:

In my previous messages I have requested the attention of the Congress to the urgent situation which has grown up in the matter of enforcement of Federal criminal laws.

After exhaustive examination of the subject, the Commission on Law Observance and Enforcement, and the officials of the Department of Justice and the Treasury Department unite in the conclusion that increasing enactment of Federal criminal laws over the past 20 years, as to which violation of the prohibition laws comprises rather more than one-half of the total arrests, has finally culminated in a burden upon the Federal courts of a character for which they are ill-designed and in many cases entirely beyond their capacity.

Much Ineffective Action.

The result is to delay civil causes, and, of even more importance, the defeat of both justice and law enforcement. Moreover, experience shows division of authority, responsibility, and lack of fundamental organization in Federal enforcement agencies and ofttimes results in ineffective action.

While some sections of the American people may disagree upon the merits of some of the questions involved every responsible citizen supports the fundamental principle that the law of the land must be enforced.

The development of the facts shows the necessity for certain important and evident administrative reforms in the enforcement and judicial machinery, concrete proposals for which are available from Government departments. They are, in the main:

1. Reorganization of the Federal court structure so as to give relief from congestion.
2. Concentration of responsibility in detection and prosecution of prohibition violations.
3. Consolidation of the various agencies engaged in prevention of smuggling of liquor, narcotics, other merchandise and aliens over our frontiers.
4. Provision of adequate court and prosecuting officials.
5. Expansion of Federal prisons and reorganization of parole and other practices.

Legislation for District Urged.

Specific legislation for the District of Columbia.

I append hereto a preliminary and a supplementary report from the Commission on Law Observance and Enforcement relating to several of these and other questions. I particularly call attention to their recommended plan for reducing congestion in the Federal courts by giving court commissioners enlarged powers in minor criminal cases.

Their discussion of the workability and the constitutionality of the plan, which is concurred in by the eminent jurists upon the commission and others whose advice they have sought, is set out in more detail in the supplementary report. I also append memorandums from the Attorney General and the Secretary of the Treasury upon several phases of these problems.

Would Curb Many Abuses.

I believe the administrative changes mentioned above will contribute to cure many abuses. Beyond these immediate questions are others which reach deeply into the whole question of the growth of crime and the enforcement of the laws. The causes of crime, the character of criminal laws, the benefits and liabilities that flow from them, the abuses which arise under them, the method by which enforcement and judicial personnel is secured, the judicial procedure, the respective responsibility of the Federal and State governments to these problems, all require further most exhaustive consideration and investigation, which will require time and earnest research as to the facts and forces in action before sound opinions can be arrived at upon them.

Enforcement Change Outlined by Mitchell

Detection Agency Shift From Treasury Is Suggested.

Padlock, Pay, Congestion and State Dry Aid Also Cited.

ATTORNEY GENERAL MITCHELL.

Following is Attorney General Mitchell's report to the President as submitted to Congress:

Dear Mr. President:

With your permission, I submit some comments upon proposals to improve enforcement of the criminal laws of the United States.

There are some obvious defects in our enforcement agencies, and there are measures that may be readily devised and taken tending to cure them. There are other defects obscure in their nature, requiring more prolonged study.

It has seemed to me, therefore, that any program for improvement naturally falls into two parts:

Two Divisions of Problem.

First: The prompt adoption of measures readily to be devised for curing obvious defects; and Second: Extended inquiry to determine the more fundamental troubles and means of remedying them.

The Department of Justice and the Commission on Law Observance and Enforcement have been cooperating in preparation of proposals which may be put into effect speedily to produce immediate improvement, having in mind that this preliminary program would be followed by more elaborate and thorough consideration of the subject. Only measures requiring new legislation need now be mentioned.

The task of enforcing criminal laws is not confined to a single agency. Several must operate efficiently to produce good results. There must be—

First. Agencies to detect offenses and obtain evidence.

Second. Prosecuting attorneys who use evidence thus prepared and try cases in court.

Third. Courts to hear cases.

At present, obvious defects exist in each of these agencies.

Court Congestion Hit.

Congestion in the courts deserves utmost consideration. In many districts Federal courts are unable to cope with the volume of business brought before them. This results in delay, with weakening of evidence and difficulty in obtaining convictions. Another effect of congestion is the effort to clear dockets by wholesale acceptance of pleas of guilty, with light punishment.

The deterrent effect of speedy trial and adequate punishment is lost. Congestion also means delay in trial of civil cases, with hardship to private litigants, particularly those of small means. This condition has been disclosed in the statistics for the year ended June 30, 1929, set forth in my annual report. That there has been no relief since June 30, 1929, is shown by telegraphic reports from United States attorneys (excepting those in the Territories) covering prohibition and narcotic cases commenced and terminated during the six months ended December 31, 1929. These reports show 28,437 prohibition and narcotic cases commenced; 25,827 such cases terminated, and 20,066 pending December 31, 1929—an increase over the number pending June 30 last and an increase as compared with those pending December 31, 1928.

Remedies Are Proposed.

Remedies:

The most important and constructive suggestion comes from the Commission on Law Observance and Enforcement in the form of a proposal to use United States commissioners for disposing of a large number of criminal cases, thus speeding the work and relieving Federal judges of burdensome details.

There are some constitutional questions involved, but in my opinion these do not present insurmountable difficulties, and the validity of the proposal is supported by such eminent jurists and lawyers as George W. Wickersham, Henry W. Anderson, Newton D. Baker, Judge William I. Grubb, Judge William S. Kenyon, Monte M. Lemann, Frank J. Loesch, Judge Kenneth Mackintosh, Judge Paul J. McCormick and Roscoe Pound, who are members of the commission.

If legislation along these lines can be made effective, a decided improvement will result.

Additional Relief Possible.

Some additional relief for congested conditions will be afforded by providing additional judges in a few districts already recommended by the conference of senior circuit judges and by me.

Delay in judicial operations through inadequate forces in the clerks' and marshals' offices may be taken care of by additional appropriations, request for which is already pending before Congress.

Agencies for detection of offenses:

Since the passage of the national prohibition act attorneys who conduct prosecutions in court have been under the Department of Justice, while the Federal agencies for detecting offenses against the national prohibition act and preparing the evidence has been in the prohibition unit in the Treasury Department. There are no agencies in the Department of Justice authorized to perform the latter function. The closest cooperation must exist between officers charged with detection of offenses and preparation of evidence, on the one hand, and United States Attorneys and their assistants, who prosecute cases, on the other hand. These agencies, now in different departments, would work together more efficiently if in the same department.

Transfer Is Arranged.

A plan has been drafted by the Department of Justice and the Treasury Department to effect such a transfer. It leaves in the Treasury Department the administrative function of issuing permits for the manufacture and distribution of industrial alcohol and related matters.

These proposals contemplate a revision of regulations respecting permits so as to provide more complete supervision to prevent diversion from authorized uses, such regulations to be prepared jointly by the Secretary of the Treasury and the Attorney General so that the legal experience of the Department of Justice in prosecutions under the National prohibition act may be utilized in the drafting of the regulations.

This plan also contemplates that in any case in which the Department of Justice has information bearing on the merits of an application for a permit, a representative of the department shall participate in the decision as to whether the permit shall issue.

Additional Pay Is Urged.

Prosecuting attorneys:

However efficient detective agencies may be, and however well equipped to handle business the courts may be, in order to produce good results the prosecuting force, that is, the United States attorneys and their assistants, must be efficient.

Some additional force increases in rates of pay should be provided for these officials to enable us to procure and retain the services of competent lawyers. I have mentioned this before. Requests for additional funds for this purpose have been made and await Congressional action.

If the amounts we have asked for prove to be insufficient, requests for additional amounts may be made.

Border Patrol Mentioned.

Attention should again be called to the necessity for reorganizing and coordinating the forces charged with patrolling borders to prevent smuggling.

An important recommendation for amendment to the national prohibition act is that relating to so-called padlock injunctions. It is intended to remedy jurisdictional difficulties which arise under the existing law.

There has already been prepared and submitted to Congress a complete plan for reorganization of our prison system, including probation and paroles, which directly relate to enforcement of criminal laws. I have also submitted to the chairman of the Senate committee on the District of Columbia specific recommendations relating to the District, so no further mention of these matters is required.

Recommendations Are Summarized.

To summarize, I recommend:

First. Immediate consideration of legislation to relieve congestion in the United States courts by—

Enlarging the powers and duties of the United States commissioners;

By providing some additional judges;

By appropriation of funds for enlarging and improving personnel in the clerks' and marshals' offices.

Second. Immediate consideration of legislation to transfer to the Department of Justice the agencies for detection of offenses under the national prohibition act.

Padlock Provision Cited.

Third. Appropriation of funds to increase rates of pay and to provide additional forces in the offices of the United States attorneys.

Fourth. Amendment to padlock injunction provisions of the national prohibition act.

In respect to prohibition, attention has recently been directed more to Federal than to State agencies for enforcement. Placing all Federal agencies in good order is not the only requirement. It has never been contemplated that the whole task of enforcing prohibition should be borne by the Federal Government. Any constructive plan for better prohibition enforcement must give attention to improvement in State as well as Federal agencies, and to adjustment between them of the burden of enforcement.

Respectfully,
(Signed) WILLIAM D. MITCHELL,
Attorney General.

WETS AND DRYS CLAIM SUPPORT IN LAW REPORT

Both Aver Wickersham Document Justifies Their Contentions.

CURRAN HOLDS LAW IS UNENFORCEABLE

Antisaloon League Reaction Also Favorable as Board Studies Suggestions.

(Associated Press.)

The preliminary report on prohibition by President Hoover's Law Enforcement Commission yesterday found favorable reaction among leaders of wet and dry organizations alike, but both groups refrained from commenting upon the suggestions that went with it to Congress from President Hoover.

Henry H. Curran, president of the association against the prohibition amendment, said in a statement that it was clear the commission "has now concluded, after eight months of study, that the problem of prohibition is not one to be solved by tinkering with enforcement procedure," and that it was clear also "that the commission believes the law as it now stands is unenforceable."

The Antisaloon League's board of directors was said at headquarters of the league here to have taken the report under consideration yesterday in Detroit, where they are meeting preliminary to the biennial convention of the league. Favorable reaction to the report by them was predicted.

Resolutions Are Expected.

The board of directors composed of two to eight members from each State, with Bishop Thomas Nicholson, of Detroit, as chairman, is expected to formulate general resolutions on prohibition, however, instead of making a pronouncement on the commission statement.

Bishop James Cannon, jr., of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, was absent from his office. His son said he did not know his father's whereabouts, "at least as far as the public is concerned."

The Methodist Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals research secretary, Deets Pickett, said, "We favor the recommendations of President Hoover as they come to us."

Mr. Curran's statement follows:

"It is clear that the commission has now concluded, after eight months of study, that the problem of prohibition is not to be solved by tinkering with enforcement procedure, but has its root deep down in fundamentals of human relations to what can and can not be done through the agency of a criminal law.

"Law Thought Unenforceable."

"It is clear also that the commission believes the law as it stands is unenforceable. I hope they will go right ahead now, after these preliminary observations, and decide how they think the law must be changed. I believe that the more they study the subject, the more surely will they approach the conviction that the eighteenth amendment must be repealed in order that the peoples of sovereign States regain their right of home rule in accordance with their diversified opinions in such a local and intimate matter as control of the liquor traffic. A single, rigid rule of Federal edict will never do. If Kansas wishes prohibition, she should have it; but Kansas should not be able to impose prohibition upon Massachusetts or any other State against the wishes of the people of such other States.

"The very essence of American government rests in the right of local self-government in local affairs. Unless we come back to that corner stone of ordered American liberty, we shall not emerge from the corruption, hypocrisy and murder which always accompanies such a mistaken departure from it as that attempted by the eighteenth amendment."

CONGRESS REVIEWS REPORT OF LAW ENFORCEMENT GROUP

sion had been unduly hurried into making a report.

Senator King (Democrat), Utah, was regretful that "public pressure has been exerted to compel a report before the commission is ready."

Representative Britten (Republican), Illinois, a wet, insisted the report "clearly shows that the commission has been hurried into a public statement by rabid drys who had been secretly informed of the damaging evidence being presented to it."

Black Foresees Roll Call.

Representative Black (Democrat), New York, a wet, hailed the proposal for codification of the prohibition laws as offering an opportunity for a roll call vote in Congress. He stated he would offer an amendment then for light wines and beer and thus obtain "an out and out showdown on the question, something we haven't had since the Volstead act."

Bringing the prohibition report before the House for discussion, Representative LaGuardia (Republican), New York, a wet, contended the proposal to give Federal commissioners the power to try petty offenders would take away the constitutional right of trial by jury.

Glass Approves Report.

Senator Glass (Democrat), Virginia, who sponsored the $350,000 appropriation for carrying out the commission's inquiry, said that "while the suggestions are not new, they are put forward with clarity and cogency and I think Congress promptly should transfer the prohibition enforcement machinery from the Treasury to the Justice Department."

Chairman Norris, of the Senate judiciary committee, reserved comment on the report until he had an opportunity to study it. He said his committee very likely would take it up at its meeting next Monday.

Senator Borah, of Idaho, a severe critic of the administration's enforcement program, likewise withheld comment until he has had an opportunity to read the lengthy report.

Other Senator's Views.

Senator Jones (Republican), Washington, a dry leader, was satisfied with the report and anxious to carry it out.

Senator Hawes (Democrat), Missouri, a wet, said in a statement that the President's recommendations in regard to prohibition, "considered as a whole, are good." He favored transfer of prohibition enforcement from the Treasury to the Justice Department and also the consolidation under the Coast Guard of all operations against smugglers.

He also said he wanted to know if there was any attempt in the commission's recommendations for trial of petty offenders to deprive any one of the right to trial by jury.

Wet Measure Proposed.

Chairman Johnson of the House immigration committee took the floor in the House at the conclusion of reading of the message, to suggest that all border forces be consolidated as recommended in the commission's report.

Another of the numerous developments was the reintroduction by Representative Auf der Heide (Republican), New Jersey, of his bill for a home rule prohibition law legalizing beer and ale containing not more than 4 per cent alcohol, and wine and cider of not more than 10 per cent.

At the same time he introduced a bill to legalize the manufacture and sale for home consumption of any fermented beverage containing not more than 2.75 per cent alcohol.

Representative Cramton (Republican), Michigan, one of the spokesmen of the dry group in the House, said he was sure "the drys in Congress, without political divisions, personal or partisan, will give cordial support to the President in the program of legislation for which he has asked."

Stalker Agrees With Program.

Representative Stalker (Republican), New York, coauthor of the Jones-Stalker law, heavily penalizing prohibition violators, said he fully concurred with the major suggestions in the reports submitted by the President.

"I fully agree with the suggestion of enlarging the powers and duties of the United States commissioners," he emphasized. "They should handle at least 50 per cent of the prohibition cases. This would solve one of the major problems and go a long way toward eliminating the congestion of the courts.

"Another important suggestion" is that the States should assume greater responsibility in enforcing the national prohibition act. The Constitution gives the States concurrent power in enforcing the eighteenth amendment."

DRY CHIEF OPPOSES INCREASE IN FUNDS

Doran Tells Congress More Than $15,000,000 Would Only Cause Jam.

SHOWS ARRESTS FEWER

(Associated Press.)

Prohibition Commissioner Doran believes the expenditure of more than $15,000,000 for Federal prohibition enforcement would be unwise because of congestion of the Federal court dockets.

The House appropriations committee was guided by the commissioner's opinion in reporting the annual Treasury-Postoffice supply bill to the House yesterday, but it allowed for the strengthening of the Coast Guard by alloting $32,123,040, an increase of $2,452,000 over the current year.

"We could make a 50 per cent increase in the number of persons arrested," Doran said, "but under present conditions it would merely congest the courts still further and further complicate the situation."

Jones Law Called Effective.

Prompt trial was necessary in prohibition cases, he said, because there was "no class of cases that get colder than prohibition cases."

Commissioner Doran said the Jones law had a great effect in driving many small liquor operators, manufacturers, runners and retailers out of business, and had served to concentrate activities of the larger operators. He cited a decrease from 75,000 arrests in 1928 to 67,000 in 1929.

Congestion of the Federal courts was worse in New York, New Jersey, northern Illinois, Pittsburgh and Philadelphia, he said, while enforcement conditions at Detroit had shown improvement after the reenforcement of the prohibition agents and the increased activities of the Coast Guard. He named the States of Wisconsin, New York, Montana, Nevada and Maryland as not assisting the Federal Government in enforcing the law, and declared that sheriffs in Southern States felt it was a Federal job to apprehend moonshiners.

Sponsored by Rear Admiral F. C. Billard, commandant of the Coast Guard, the program for enlarging that service was adopted to provide for additional ships to be used in antismuggling work, increased personnel, more stations and new seaplanes. The sum of $18,807,190, more than half the entire allotment, was specified for use in antismuggling activities.

Admiral Billard advised the committee that although smuggling conditions on all the United States coasts were about the same last year, there had been an increase of liquor smuggling off the New England coast in recent months. The French island of St. Pierre, he said, evidently was the source of the liquor.

"The Coast Guard has been very earnestly and actively engaged in combatting smuggling," Admiral Billard said. "I am confident that it is doing as well as any Marine force could do with that problem."

AIRPORT MOVEMENT GETS NEW IMPETUS

and the National Air Transport Corporations; F. J. Bishop, of the Western Air Express, and Capt. Thomas Carroll, vice president of the Federal Aviation Corporation, which is constructing Washington Airport.

The keynote of the meeting, as sounded by Senator Bingham, was the deviation from the aim of a definite location for an airport, but the establishment of an airport in "any location so long as it is a suitable one." Also the meeting pointed out the need for not just one airport, but for two or three, as that many will be needed to take care of the future air needs of the National Capital, it was asserted.

Declared Senator Bingham: "If we are going to be on the air map of this country we have got to do what other great cities have done, and that is dip into our pockets and spend the money. The Federal Government should share part of this expense. Washington is sadly behind the capitals of Europe in air facilities. Even in this country we are far behind. There are 1,000 airports in the United States, and 1,500 are in the process of construction. We should have at least one, and we should not be contented until we get the best."

The meeting was supplemented by exhibition flights of model airplanes entered by local boys in the national model plane contest. There was also an exhibition of model airport drawings which won prizes in a contest conducted by the Lehigh Portland Cement Co.

U. S. BUILDING FUND IS PROVIDED IN BILL

000 will be laid off, due to the consolidation of the bureau's activities in one building. Those who will be affected are mostly junior clerks and messengers.

At the same time the office of the general counsel in the bureau will increase its staff by 25 attorneys and 25 clerks, the former to receive $3,800 each and the latter 1,620 each. The extra workers are needed to speed up the work in that office.

The Bureau of Customs gets $35,080 for the employment of 24 additional workers, and $4,220 is provided for raises.

In his report accompanying the bill, Chairman Wood said that the $7,000,000 asked for the purchase of more property in the Pennsylvania avenue Mall triangle will send the total appropriated for that purpose to $21,680,000. Under a bill passed in the last Congress a total of $25,000,000 is authorized to be spent for land, but it is not believed that more than $22,000,000 will be needed.

The authorization for Federal buildings here is $50,000,000. So, far, Chairman Wood reported, $47,968,741 has been allotted.

Wood points out, however, that there is now pending the Keyes-Elliott bill which authorizes an additional $115,000,000 for the Federal building program here. This measure has passed the House and is expected to pass the Senate in the near future.

Youngest Deputy Sheriff Holds Honorary Job

Buffalo, N. Y., Jan. 13.—On Sheriff Charles A. Freiberg's staff is the youngest honorary deputy sheriff in the United States. The distinction is held by Arthur L. Swartz, jr., the 12-year-old son of Assemblyman Arthur L. Swartz, who was the new sheriff's campaign adviser.

Young Swartz was sworn into office when Sheriff Freiberg pinned a gold badge on his coat lapel. The honor was conferred at an impromptu reception held at the jail.

Enforcement Commission Details Law Amendments

Suggests Method of Making Padlock Injunctions More Effective and New Procedure for Casual and Slight Violations to Relieve Court Congestion.

(Associated Press.)

The law enforcement commission, in its very voluminous supplementary report, dealt almost entirely with amendments to the existing statutes and cited numerous circumstances and authorities to support its views.

On the proposal to amend the padlock injunction section of the Volstead act to make it more effective, the commission recommended:

"If in any proceeding under this section it is made to appear to the court that any person or persons unknown have or claim an interest in such room, house, building, structure, boat, vehicle, or place, or some part thereof, which would be affected by the order prayed for, it may order that such person or persons unknown be made parties by designating them as unknown owners of, or claimants of some interest in the property described, and such person or persons, and any defendant or defendants who are absent from the jurisdiction or whom, whether within or without the jurisdiction, it is impracticable to serve otherwise, or who are shown to the satisfaction of the court to be concealing themselves for the purpose of evading service or process or of any order of the court, may be served in accordance with the provisions of section 57 of the judicial code (title 28, section 118, U. S. C.)."

Making Use of State Aid.

This amendment to the Volstead act was recommended by the commission so as to take full advantage of the activities of State officers in cases of unlawful transportation:

"Any State, county, or municipal officer of the law may, on discovery of any person in the act of transporting in violation of this title intoxicating liquors in any wagon, buggy, automobile, water or air craft, or other vehicle, seize the same and any and all intoxicating liquors found therein being transported contrary to law, and arrest any person in charge of the same, and may thereupon proceed against such person and property in the appropriate Federal court as hereinbefore provided."

"As to the need of this," the Commission said, "we have the testimony of a number of prohibition administrators and an interesting statement in the prohibition survey of New York. Experience has shown that inability to take full advantage of the activities of State officers in localities where they are inclined to cooperate has been a source of embarrassment, particularly in States in which there is no State enforcement law under which to carry on a State prosecution. As things are, the most that such officers do is, if so inclined, to notify the prohibition administrator of what they have found, and leave it to his frequently overworked office to send to the locality and take charge."

Casual Violations Defined.

This amendment to the Jones law was proposed by the Commission for the purpose of defining "casual or slight violations," of the Volstead act:

"For the purpose of prosecution, the following shall be deemed casual or slight violations: (1) Unlawful possession, (2) single sales of small quantities by persons not engaged in habitual violation of the law, (3) unlawful making of small quantities where no other person is employed, (4) assisting in making or transporting as a casual employee only, (5) transportating of small quantities by persons not habitually engaged in transportation of illicit liquors or habitually employed by habitual violators of the law."

This should be considered in connection with our proposal as to relief of congestion in the Federal courts," the Commission said. "We propose that in case of 'casual or slight violations,' the District Attorney may prosecute by complaint or information and in such case, if so prosecuted, the penalty for each offense shall be a fine not to exceed $500 or imprisonment in jail (not at hard labor) not to exceed six months or both. Thus the discretion of the judge as to sentence in all cases prosecuted by indictment remains. Also we propose that the District Attorney may prosecute any case by indictment with the possibility of severe penalties. But in the five cases named he may prosecute by complaint or information and the matter may be disposed of summarily."

Court Congestion Problem.

On the subject of the relief of congestion in the Federal courts, the commission said:

"Complaints of congestion in the Federal courts, due to the large number of petty prosecutions under the national prohibition act, come from many parts of the country. For example, in one of the less populous districts there were 1,263 liquor prosecutions in the year just ended and 800 cases are now pending.

"It is not merely that this volume of prosecutions clogs the dockets and interferes with the other business of the courts. In order to dispose of the cases at all it is necessary to resort to 'bargain days' or to hold a 'cafeteria court,' with serious effects on the dignity of the tribunal and on respect for the Federal courts.

"In one large city Saturday is 'bargain day.' Ninety-five per cent of those prosecuted in liquor cases plead guilty, are fined, and go their way as in a police court. In one Federal court there are 30 to 35 pleas of guilty on each weekly 'bargain day.'

"Under such circumstances the severe penalties prescribed by the law become a joke. Moreover, it happens not infrequently, but those who ought to be dealt with severely are able to take advantage of the crowded dockets and participate in the bargain penalties. Petty prosecutions must go on. It will not do to create an impression that minor infractions are to be tolerated. But the pressure of the large column of prosecutions for minor infractions, due to the necessity of proceeding in the great run of cases by indictment and jury trial, seriously interferes with vigorous handling of major infractions and makes the treatment of minor infractions perfunctory. This condition and the resulting policy of wholesale disposition of cases on bargain days had done much toward creating a feeling in some localities that the law cannot be enforced."

Simpler Prosecution Plan.

Calling attention that a distinction is made in the Jones law between "casual or slight violations" and major violations, the commission said this distinction might be taken advantage of to set up a category of offenses to be the subject of simpler prosecution.

"Legislation defining the term casual or slight violations," it said, "providing that the district attorney may prosecute such violations upon complaint or by information, and that in such cases, when so prosecuted, the penalty for each offense should be a fine not to exceed $500, or confinement in jail, without hard labor, not to exceed six months, or both, would obviate the long delay, unnecessary expense, the needless keeping in session of grand juries, which are demanded by the present state of the law. * * *

"It has been seen that the necessity of indictment by a grand jury depends on the possibility of punishment attached to the charge. The Jones law prescribes for every offense under title 2 of the national prohibition act a possible maximum punishment of five years imprisonment. Hence since that law every prosecution, even for the most casual or slight violation, except for unlawful possession or for maintenance of a nuisance, requires the action of a grand jury.

Jury Question Deferred.

"A question might be raised why the maximum penalties for casual or slight violations are proposed to be fixed as low as a fine of $500 and six months in jail. The answer is that we have to consider also the constitutional provisions with respect to jury trial and the limits of petty prosecutions in which hearing before a magistrate is constitutionally allowable. This will be considered in another connection.

"Another question might arise as to the need of defining 'casual or slight violations.' The Jones law gives a wide judicial discretion as to sentence. This discretion will remain in all cases prosecuted by indictment. It is necessary to define a class of offenses with respect to which the accused is not potentially subjected to an infamous punishment. The surest way of doing this is by defining the term already used in the law."

After citing many cases regarding the constitutional right of a trial before jury and before a United States Commissioner, the commission said:

"It is clear that what is done before a commissioner is done in the district court. So if it were provided that prosecution for a petty offense should be heard before a commissioner, it would be heard before a magistrate in and as a proceeding of the district court. A provision for judgment and sentence by the judge would make this very clear. So a plea of guilty before a commissioner would be a plea of guilty in the district court. It could be reported to the judge, who could render judgment of conviction on it by imposing sentence. The basis for the judgment of conviction (or of acquittal on plea of not guilty) would be a plea of guilty or a hearing in the district court, although before a commissioner. By providing for report to the court and judgment (sentence) by the judge, any question of exercise of judicial power by the commissioner is avoided."

Would Create Petty Status.

Finally the commission said the plan recommended in its preliminary report was as follows:

"To define 'casual or slight violations' and provide for penalties in those cases such as to keep them within the category of petty offenses.

"To enable the district attorney to prosecute such violations by complaint or information.

"To provide that in case the accused, so prosecuted, pleads guilty, such plea may be made before a United States commissioner and reported by him to the court, and judgment of conviction may be rendered and sentence imposed by the court.

"To provide that in case the accused, so prosecuted, pleads not guilty, there shall be a hearing before a United States commissioner, who shall report to the court, and the court, on examination of his findings, may render judgment of acquittal or conviction as the case may be, and in case of conviction impose sentence.

"To provide that, if conviction is recommended by the United States commissioner, the accused may, within three days after filing of the commissioner's report, except to the report in writing and call for trial by jury.

"Finally to provide that in the latter case the district attorney may elect whether to go to trial on the complaint or information or to submit the case to a grand jury, and in case the grand jury indicts, that the case shall proceed upon the indictment.

Penalty Scale Suggested.

"In order to carry out these recommendations, a paragraph should be added at the end of section 29, title 2, national prohibition act, as follows:

"In case of casual or slight violations, as hereinbefore defined, the district attorney may prosecute upon complaint or information, and in such cases, when so prosecuted, the penalty for each offence shall be a fine of not to exceed five hundred dollars ($500) or confinement in jail, without hard labor, not to exceed six months, or both."

"For the remainder of the proposal, a separate act would be needed.

"We recommend the following:

"'Section 1. In prosecutions by complaint of information for casual or slight violatoins of title 2 of the national prohibition act, the accused shall plead to the complaint or information before the United States commissioner before whom he may be taken pursuant to section 595, title 18, U. S. C. If he pleads guilty, the commissioner shall transmit the complaint and warrant to the clerk of the district court, with a report of the plea, and thereupon judgment of conviction shall be rendered and sentence imposed by a judge of the court.'

"Section 2. If the accused so prosecuted pleads not guilty, there shall be a hearing before the United States commissioner, who shall have the same powers with respect to summoning witnesses for prosecution and defense as those of a magistrate in a prosecution before him under the usual mode of process in the State, and the commissioner shall, as soon as practicable thereafter, transmit the complaint and warrant to the clerk of the district court, with a report of the plea and hearing and his findings and recommendations, and a judge of the court, on examination of the report and findings, may render judgment of conviction or acquittal, as the case may be, and, in case of conviction, impose sentence.

Provision for Exception.

"Section 3. In case conviction is recommended by the commissioner, the accused my within three days after filing of the commissioner's report, except to the report in writing, and may also demand trial by jury. In case trial by juryt is not so demanded, it shall operate as a waiver of any right thereto.

"Section 4. In case the report of the commissioner is excepted to and trial by jury demanded, the district attorney may elect whether to go to trial on the complaint or information or to submit the case to a grand jury; and in case the grand jury finds an indictment, the prosecution shall then proceed upon such indictment.

"Section 5. In addition to the fees provided for in section 597, title 28, U. S. C., the United States commissioner shall be entitled to the followinb fees: For reporting a plea of not guilty, $1; for hearing, finding and report in case of plea of not guilty, $5.

"Section 6. The circuit judges in each circuit shall thave power to make rules for the details of practice suitable to carry out the several provisions of this act."

Rambling 'Pony' Proves Horse Valued at $3,000

A supposed Shetland pony, found astray Sunday by Fifth Precinct police, yesterday was discovered to be a midget horse, valued at $3,000.

The horse was claimed by Edward Oliveri, a showman, who places the high valuation on the animal because of its ability to perform tricks. The animal wandered away from training quarters maintained by Oliveri at Ninth street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast Sunday and was found near the Fifth Precinct Building, Fifth and E streets southeast.

Oliveri stated that the horse, which is only five hands in height, is 12 years old. The animal, known as "Tom," has amused audiences of this Nation and Europe with its ability to tell fortunes and ages by pounding its hoofs, spelling with lettered blocks and performing similar tricks.

NEW LAW METHODS URGED BY W. C. T. U.

1930 Model Machinery, as Crime Board Requests, Wins Approval.

HOOVER STAND PRAISED

Evanston, Ill., Jan. 13 (A.P.).—The following statement was issued today from the national offices here of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union, regarding the report of the President's commission on law observance and law enforcement:

"The President's commission on law observance and law enforcement makes it plain that, while Uncle Sam is bigger than the bootlegger, law enforcement is hampered by cumbersome legal machinery which should be exchanged for a 1930 model.

"President Hoover promised vigorous enforcement of law to the criminal; the Commission's recommendations should be carefully considered by Congress to the end that inadequate legal procedures, crowded courts and technicalities under which criminals escape should be replaced with the kind of codes, courts and practices whereby criminals will speedily take their proper place behind the bars.

"There is nothing in the Commission's report to indicate that there will be any recommendation to modify the strict prohibition of the liquor traffic; nothing in President Hoover's letter of transmittal to Congress to indicate that he is going to offer any compromise in his expressed view that he believes the eighteenth amendment is for the protection of the American home and that he wishes it to succeed.

"The present administration was elected largely because it had the support of millions of Americans opposed to the liquor traffic, legal or illegal. A large part of the criticism of prohibition arises because there is too much illegal liquor distributed by bootleggers. The aim of the administration is to reduce illegal liquor to a minimum and in that effort it will have the support of millions of earnest Americans.

"The National W. C. T. U. congratulates the Commission on its stand for vigorous and complete enforcement of the law and it trusts that Congress will enact the proper legislation."

Taft Is Jocular; Goes South Today

Chief Justice in Happy Vein Prior to Vacation of Several Weeks.

(Associated Press.)

Chief Justice Taft was in his customary cheerful mood yesterday with his characteristic chuckle punctuating his conversations.

All plans have been perfected for his departure today. It has been decided that Mrs. Taft will accompany him to Grove Park Inn, Asheville, N. C., where he will remain for several weeks. Dr. Thomas A. Claytor, the heart specialist who has treated him for several years, also will make the trip, and a nurse, familiar with the condition of the distinguished patient, will go to remain during his period of recuperation.

Dr. Claytor will discuss the Chief Justice's physical condition with the hpysician who will attend him in Asheville and will give instructions concerning his diet and treatment.

Dr. Frank Hagner, who has treated the Chief Justice at a hospital here for the past week for bladder troubles, said he was well pleased with the improvement in his condition and that after rest Mr. Taft should be able to resume his court duties soon.

Two Autos Are Crippled By Pig, Which Escapes

Natick, Mass., Jan 17.—In a conflict between a pig and two autos on South Main street here the pig ambled home after the fray, bruised and badly crippled, but the autos had to be towed to a nearby garage for repairs.

It happened when an auto, operated by Kimball Johnson, of Brookline, struck the pig squarely on the snout as the animal rushed into the street. According to Johnson, the pig careened off his car and struck a sedan parked at the side of the road, owned by Thomas F. Jackman, of Central street, Millville.

THE NATION'S PROBLEM.

President Hoover's message to Congress, accompanying the report of the National Crime Commission, indicates that his administration is ready to shoulder the responsibility of enforcing prohibition. It is evident that the administration does not expect the States to carry on any large share of the burden. The Federal Government plans to tighten up enforcement, from the flow of liquor over the borders to detection of petty violations.

The eighteenth amendment gives the State and Federal Governments concurrent powers to prevent traffic in intoxicating liquors. By enactment of the Volstead act Congress has placed upon the Federal Government the greater share of the responsibility of drying up the country. Some States passed enforcement statutes, and some refused to do so. But no State has done its full duty under the eighteenth amendment. The result has been general failure of prohibition enforcement, because the Federal Government does not fully exercise the police power of the States.

At the beginning of the present investigation Chairman Wickersham, of the Law Enforcement Commission, suggested that the solution lay in better cooperation by the States. Apparently the administration feels that the States can not be relied upon to enforce this law, and therefore advocates a batch of reforms designed to extend Federal control on all fronts. The proposals for creation of a unified border patrol under the Coast Guard and designation of specific points of entry on the Canadian border are designed to cope with smuggling. To deal with the manufacture, sale and transportation of liquor within the country the courts would be reorganized to relieve congestion, the enforcement agency would be transferred from the Treasury to the Department of Justice, the personnel of court and prosecution offices would be augmented, and as a matter of course, prison facilities would be expanded.

The recommendation of the commission that "casual or slight" violations be heard before United States commissioners and sent to the courts without the formality and delay incident to action by grand juries suggests that special attention will be given to petty cases as well as to smuggling and wholesale manufacture and transportation of liquor. Apparently the administration shares the belief of many drys that prohibition has never been given a real chance, and has determined to enforce the law to the full extent of its ability.

This move is a logical outcome of the evolution through which prohibition has gone during the last ten years. In general the States have accepted the law in theory and left its enforcement to the Government. As Congress strengthens the Federal enforcement machinery and prescribes more severe punishment, the States indulge in further relaxation. The necessity of cooperation by the States is repeatedly emphasized, but it appears that the administration is not disposed to "let things slide" until such cooperation is forthcoming.

If Federal authorities propose to enforce the law regardless of the apathy and even opposition of some States, all these proposed reinforcements and more will be needed. Despite the calls for State cooperation the Government is moving in the direction of a Federal constabulary which, so far as prohibition is concerned, may supplant State and local officers. It is emphasized that the findings of the President's commission are not conclusive, and the recommendations are made as expedients for dealing with the current situation.

The fundamental obstacle to the enforcement of the eighteenth amendment is the failure to impose enforcement duty upon the States. This defect has been intensified by the enactment of a very drastic Federal law while failing to provide machinery to take the place of the police machinery of the States. In States where majority sentiment forbids State enforcement and opposes the Federal law it is obvious that enforcement will never be effective until the Government sets up a full police machine. The prospect of a Federal constabulary, exercising police control over individuals within the State, side by side with a State police machine that is opposed to the Federal law and the Federal constabulary, arouses the apprehension of thoughtful citizens. Clashes between Federal and State authorities are foreseen, which may entail most deplorable consequences.

Broadly viewed, all citizens would agree that a law opposed by the States can not be enforced. It is now proposed to make a more thorough test to determine whether the Federal Government can enforce a national law which is opposed by some States, reluctantly accepted by others, and wholeheartedly supported by none.

TEACHING US TO THINK.

On the eve of the naval conference there is developing a far-flung and well organized plan to teach Americans how to think properly in international matters. The campaign is expected to continue for many months. The tuition period will probably not end until the Senate acts upon the world court and until unforeseen consequences of the naval conference are thoroughly discussed in connection with the foreign idea of America's responsibility to enforce peace under the Kellogg pact.

The trouble with the American way of thinking on international subjects, according to the leaders of the new propaganda, is a lack of ability to subordinate American traditions and American ideals to the international concepts of Europe. This basic idea was expressed with force and elegance by a British spokesman at a recent meeting of the Foreign Policy Association at Philadelphia. He said:

> The time has come when we must think in terms of the whole, round, beggarly, cock-eyed world.

The tendency of Americans to think in terms of American needs, America's national defense and America's traditional avoidance of European political entanglements has brought about the situation which the internationalists still hope to break.

Speeches by foreign propagandists in advance of the London conference stress the new idea. Nearly every European reference to the Kellogg pact implies that the United States must accept responsibility in connection with "enforcement" of this pact.

The international propagandists are going into action this week, in advance of an organized drive aimed chiefly at the Senate. Americans will be shown that the road to peace and the cure of war should become slogans closely linked with European ideals and European thought. Americans must guard against comparing the record of Europe in this respect with the record of the United States, because this would be lapsing back into the old-fashioned American way of thinking. The fact that European wars have always accompanied such protestations for peace as are now being made must also be overlooked. The dawn of the new day, it will be pointed out, places the preservation of peace in the hands of the nations of Europe, and it is America's duty to abandon her traditions and assume her responsibilities toward maintenance of world peace by whatever means the superior intellect of Europe may deem necessary.

If the American mind had received the proper tuition a decade ago the question of debts owed to America, the question of American tariffs, and questions affecting the present financial and economic superiority of the United States might have been solved along very different lines. By thinking in terms of the world rather than in terms of American needs, the people of the United States might now be distributing their prosperity throughout the world. Their selfishness in insisting upon higher wages and a higher standard of living than those prevailing in other countries is a reproach to them. They should share their blessings with the countries that have bankrupted themselves by war, indolence and vice. They should abandon the exercise of their own judgment and be guided by the superior judgment of Europe, which has succeeded in achieving universal poverty and practically incessant war. Otherwise the Americans will be proved guilty of crabbed adherence to old American traditions.

THE GREAT BUILDING PROGRAM.

The appropriation bill covering the Treasury and Postoffice Departments makes generous provision for carrying on the construction work of the Government in the District of Columbia. An appropriation of $7,000,000 is proposed for the acquisition of land within the Triangle, and $23,000,000 is allotted to continue the building program in Washington and throughout the country. The total contemplated expenditure for public buildings in the District under existing and pending legislation amounts to $190,000,000.

This enormous expenditure, instead of being an extravagance, will prove to be economical, in view of the absolute necessities of the Government. It is a question of providing suitable buildings or paying out excessive rents for unsatisfactory accommodations. The bill laid before the House yesterday carries $1,200,000 for rental of temporary quarters, to accommodate the Treasury and Postoffice Departments alone. Other departments are renting temporary quarters at correspondingly heavy expense.

Now that Congress has adopted a plan for the housing of the Government, it is well that the annual appropriations for the work should be as large as can be advantageously expended by the constructing authorities.

One good current topic for bets is: How much of the preliminary report of the crime commission was copied from the instructions given the commission seven months ago by the President?

The fact that a New Yorker continued singing "Sweet Adeline" after he had been run over by an elevated testifies to something or other about the quality of modern hooch.

Why not create a commission to investigate why the House refuses to join a commission to confer with the commission on law enforcement?

Another duty of Dwight Morrow in London will be to straighten out the British "Who's Who" on who's the father-in-law of Lindy.

TWO UNIQUE CHARACTERS

By The Bookman, in Manitoba Free Press.

The MS. of "Home, Sweet Home" was lately given to the Congressional Library, Washington, by one of the secretaries of the British Embassy. It appeared originally in "Clari," one of Payne's many plays. But two stanzas were added in 1829 in honor of a Mrs. Bates, wife of a London banker, both New Englanders. I dare say that they, too, would be a bit homesick occasionally, though they were rich, and popular in their London coterie. Mrs. Bates had asked Payne to write the words of his song in her old-fashioned autograph album, and in writing them he added two personal stanzas. "I have added a few words addressed to you," he said. "What they want in poetry, you will do me the justice to believe is made up in truth."

"To us, in despite of the absence of years
How sweet the remembrance of home still appears!
From allurements abroad which but flatter the eye
The unsatisfied heart turns and says with a sigh:
"Home, home! Sweet, sweet home!" etc.

"Your exile is blessed with all that fate can bestow—
But mine has been chequered with many a woe!
Yet though diff'rent our fortunes, our thoughts are the same,
And both, as we dream of Columbia, exclaim:
'Home, home!' etc."

J. Howard Payne was born in 1791 at New York and appeared on the stage in 1809 with startling success. He played in England and in Ireland with Eliza O'Neill, the tragic actress who succeeded Mrs. Siddons. He retired from the stage in 1832, and died while American Consul at Tunis in 1852. There is a monument on the spot where he was buried, and where the body lay until removed to Washington 31 years later. Some years ago, there appeared in one of the magazines a narrative of Payne's relations with Shelley's widow who was said to have trifled with him. Whether true or not, I saw nothing more.

The biography of Alfred Nobel, published in England by Heinemann, discovers to the world a money-maker of strange contrasts. The more deadly and devilish became the explosives he manufactured, the more pacific he became in his mind. Behind all his genius for big business and the weapons of destruction was the essential scientist. "He had not merely the capacity but a positive urge to give forth original ideas." Besides applied chemistry, his interests included optics, electricity, biology, physiology, gunnery, machinery. He spoke with fluency five languages and wrote some English verse. When he proposed to buy a newspaper, a relative thought and said that it was in the interest of his armaments. He replied that he wanted to own a newspaper in order to arouse and stimulate liberal views. "My policy as a newspaper owner would be to use my influence against armaments and such medieval survivals, but to urge that if they are to be manufactured they should be manufactured at home." In another part of the letter, he says: "It is one of my peculiarities that I never consider my private interests." Very ingenuous and naive, and revealing, too! Alfred Nobel never married. He died in 1896 at the age of 63. He invented dynamite and an even more powerful explosive, "blasting gelatin." And he went farther still in the invention and manufacture of death-dealing munitions. Also, he made immense money out of oil fields. Explain the psychology of Alfred Nobel if you can.

Whom the Gods Would Destroy, They First Afflict With That Superior Feeling

By ROBERT QUILLEN

WHEN a young racketeer with white hands and hard eyes wishes to enlist a former friend in the service of his master, he says: "Why don't you quit work? There's nothing in that game. You slave all your life for ham and eggs and your relatives chip in to bury you when you die. Come in with my gang and get a cut of the big jack. Why be a sucker all your life?"

And yet the young racketeer comes soon or late to a steel cage where he must spend five or ten dreary, lonely, shameful years in misery.

What is he if he isn't a "sucker?" He has easy money for a time, but think of the price he pays! Five years of servitude for "five grand."

Those who pay too much for what they get are earth's simpletons. The word "sucker" was coined to describe them.

Today there are in America thousands of young men and young women who are nervous wrecks. They are burned out. The life they elected to live broke them.

While they were fresh and able to keep pace with the gayest and fastest and drunkest of revelers, they scorned the old-fashioned yokels who worked and saved and went to bed at night with a clear head and a clean conscience; but now they would give all they possess to feel good once more without a "bracer"—to awake in the morning glad to be alive and eager to be out in the sunlight.

They were "suckers"—nothing else. They had all that made life worth while, and they traded it for shattered nerves and bitter memories. Could any untutored plowboy from the backwoods do worse?

Think of the women who lived in secure respectability and quit it, scorning the "narrow-minded gossips," to find romance in violated honor. They sit deserted in dingy boarding houses, ashamed to go back.

How gladly they would exchange places with the "stupid" and "dumb" they once derided. Few things on earth seem so desirable to them now as "dull respectability" and the good opinion of commonplace people.

The fools who think themselves smart are easiest to trick. And that, perhaps, explains the wreck of those who felt sophisticated and superior and yet were stupid enough to trade health, reputation and happiness for a season's revel.

Vanity tricked them, as it tricks us all. The magician still finds a victim by asking some smart boy to come forward.

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

The Inadequate Dash.

The more one sees of the 1930 automobiles the more one comes to the conclusion that the geegaws on the dash are inadequate. There should be more of them. Every year the manufacturer makes the dash a little more elaborate and intricate, but there is still much ground to cover.

* * * *

This department respectfully suggests, in the interest of the complete dashboard, the following additions:

1. Automatic egg boiler.
2. Razor strop and kit.
3. Barometer.
4. Aspirin slot.
5. Electric iron.
6. Electric toaster.
7. Coffee percolator.
8. Red pepper ejector.
9. Orange squeezer.
10. Chloroform spray.

* * * *

Every motorist has been through the experience of becoming hungry on tour and having recourse only to hot-dog stands or peanut venders. To be able to press something on the dash and get a three-minute egg, some dry toast and hot coffee has been the yearning of every motorist. What have the car designers done to meet this demand? Nothing.

* * * *

Impending weather changes are something which concern all tourists, yet they may search the dash from left to right and back again without finding a barometer. Headaches assail all motorists, particularly through Sunday traffic, yet no designer has put on the dash a gadget which will release aspirin tablets.

* * * *

On long tours there are times when the wife would like to press a skirt or something, but has any automobile designer ever made it possible to reach to the dash and get an electric iron?

* * * *

And rep pepper! How many times in the course of any motor trip has the driver longed for a device that would eject a pack of red pepper into the face of the pursuing motor cop? How often has the married driver yearned to reach for a button that would envelop the rear-seat driver with the all-overpowering essence of chloroform?

How often has the party wanted orange juice for a wayside cocktail or something, and yet been powerless? Is there a motorist who has never felt that he would gladly scrap the clock, the oil gauge, the speedometer and all the other seventeen gadgets on the dash for a good bottle opener?

* * * *

And why has it never occurred to any designer to place on the dash a compartment containing ferocious false mustaches which a driver, upon being bumped in the rear by another tourist, could affix to his upper lip while he leaned out and barked, "Whazzamattah with you?"

* * * *

NATIVE SONS IN SENATE.

When Clinton Gilbert, Washington correspondent, wrote in his "Mirrors of Washington" a little while ago that few members of the United States Senate were born in the States they represent in the upper chamber at the National Capital, an investigation of the origin of the South's representation in the Senate was prompted, which led to the discovery that nine of the States which were members of the Confederacy have native sons representing them, says the Houston Post Dispatch. Tennessee and Florida are the exceptions to the rule of native son senatorial representation from the South.

Southern representation in the Senate is distinctly Southern. That may explain Southern solidarity in that body. Some of the Western States are beginning to send native sons to the Senate, but inasmuch as the majority of their citizens are immigrants from the older States, it will be a long time before they are able to make such a native son showing at Washington as the Southern States do.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Considerations Which Favor Retrocession to the District of Columbia of Its Former Area in Virginia.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In heading a movement for the restoration to the Federal District of its former territory in Virginia the Arlington County Back-to-the-District Association has undertaken no easy task.

The three parties upon whose final action the fate of the movement will mainly depend, are the Government of the United States, the State of Virginia, and the City of Alexandria.

Considering its present attitude regarding Capital City development in connection with the modern tendency to extend metropolitan areas, the chances are that Congress would favor retrocession after considerable investigation and debate. That Virginia would fail to favor the proposition against the wishes of a strong majority of the voters of the territory involved is not likely. And here the question of retrocession becomes problematical.

In the eighteenth century, before the National Capital was moved to the District, Alexandria was a thriving colonial port whose merchant ships sailed every sea. After that her trade declined and she ceased to progress until would-be wits had only to make reference to her cobbled grass-grown streets in order to raise a laugh.

Within a generation past she has awakened from her long sleep, due to her proximity to the Capital. Today, with her area recently doubled and a population of 25,000, she gives promise of a rapid commercial and manufacturing growth with the possibility of becoming the business metropolis of Virginia.

Under the circumstances the municipal pride of Alexandria may for a time stand in the way of the back-to-the-District movement. But I have little doubt that she will finally be wise enough to realize the business advantage, not to mention the social and esthetic significance, of a return to the jurisdiction of the United States.

Indeed, the industrial advantage to both Washington and Alexandria will be very great.

And it is hardly necessary to point out that, for the purposes of the opulent and magnificent City Beautiful of the future, the union of a Maryland and a Virginia area, with their interflowing river of alongshore and island parks, will be ideal.

That is to say, our contiguous Virginia territory is topographically essential to the full municipal development of the National Capital.

In the channel of the Potomac we have one of the finest of inland harbors. Not the least of its governmental advantages is remoteness from the sea coast. The location of Navy yard dry docks and naval equipment plants in Alexandria County would be expedient from every point of view.

In addition to this, the Potomac, with the varied beauty of its banks, is our chief scenic asset, and the costly task of preserving that beauty unimpaired is more than Alexandria could stand and properly belongs to the National Government.

So it is evident that without an adequate area on the far side of the Potomac the Federal District is physically incomplete. Those who planned it must have taken this into consideration when they joined a strip of land from Maryland with another strip from Virginia in its original formation. Otherwise, with a view to greater convenience in the early stages of its development, its territory would have been taken wholly from one or the other of the two States. FEDERALIST.

Dry Killings Arouse Opposition to Prohibition Law.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Men with conscience and a sacred regard for human life should be selected for all Government jobs involving the carrying and use of deadly weapons. The British Method of Dealing With Drunken Drivers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In reference to J. P. Hayes' letter re: Life imprisonment for fourth offender drunken drivers, how would it do to apply the English method?

When Fred Hopkins, of Vesey Farm, Great Holland, Essex, was convicted for being drunk in charge of a motor car, he was fined $200 and $15 costs, and disqualified forever from holding a driving license. This would be better than life imprisonment. E. STEAD.

WONDERS OF THE STARS.

Sir James Jeans has amply fulfilled his ideal in making this account of modern astronomy "intelligible to readers with no special scientific knowledge."

It is a trifle overwhelming to read at one sitting; that is simply because of the gigantic data and concepts which it introduces to the lay reader. We learn that the age of the universe can now be calculated with fair certainty by several diverse trains of reasoning, according to the London Spectator, and that it is probably about five million million years since what may be reasonably called the creation.

The earth, however, is not more than two thousand million years old as a separate planet. All this time the great machine of the cosmos has been kept going by the annihilation of matter—or rather by its change in radiation.

LABOR BOARD MOVES FOR SHORTER WEEK

Will Consider Plan to Cut Working Hours as Cure for Unemployment.

FINE SCRUTINY PLEDGED

St. Petersburg, Fla., Jan. 13 (A.P.). Decision to give careful consideration to a plan for bringing about a gradual reduction in the working man's hours of labor, with the hope of effecting an improvement in the unemployment situation of the country, was reached today by the executive council of the American Federation of Labor in midwinter convention here.

The council believes that solution of the unemployment problems could be obtained, at least partially, if an 8-hour day were made universal, and further improved through establishment of a 5-day week, President William Green declared after today's session.

"We understand that many men now are working 10 or more hours a day in various lines of industry, some of which is night work," said President Green, "and we do not feel that there is any necessity for any worker to be called on to work more than eight hours a day in any of the highly industrial establishments of the country.

Conditions Growing Worse.

"Even on the railroads, men are working more than eight hours even though the 8-hour day is the basis of pay. That seriously affects the number of men at work—it reduces the number of men in employment.

"I think conditions in that respect are worse now than before enactment of the Adamson law during President Wilson's administration, which made the eight-hour day the basis of pay for the transportation department of the railroads."

President Green added that the matter would be given further consideration before the convention adjourns the latter part of this week.

Council members took up today the consideration of a successor to the late James Noonan, fifth vice president, but decided to defer appointment until the organization's next meeting, which will be held in Washington next May.

Oppose Hooper Appointment.

President Green said the members also decided to oppose the appointment of Ben W. Hooper, former member of the Labor Board, as a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission on the grounds that when he was on the Labor Board he "was not friendly to labor." Hooper is a former governor of Tennessee.

"We feel that if Hooper had acted wisely and judiciously when he was on the Labor Board, the strike of shopmen in 1922 could have been averted," President Green said, without amplifying his statement.

Among other actions taken by the council today were the refusal of an application for membership into the labor federation by various groups of insurance agents, on the ground that "the situation at present is too complicated." The sessions probably will be concluded Friday.

$30,000,000 Is Capital For New Cotton Group

(Associated Press.)

With approximately $800,000 of the $30,000,000 authorized capital stock subscribed within a few hours after incorporation at Wilmington, Del., the American Cotton Cooperative Association got away yesterday to what Chairman Legge of the Federal Farm Board declared to be the "finest start" made by any of the national commodity marketing associations.

Selection of a headquarters city and election of officers still troubled the national organization committee, which automatically became the cotton corporation's first board of directors. Frank Buford, attorney for the committee, said it had laid the question of selecting officials aside until today.

More River and Harbor Funds Are Predicted

(Associated Press.)

Chairman Dempsey, of the House rivers and harbors committee, after a conference yesterday with President Hoover, said he felt the administration would favor an additional outlay for river and harbor work beyond the $55,000,000 provided in the annual War Department supply bill.

Chairman Dempsey said he understood that the Chief Executive had made a careful investigation through the engineers and had concluded that $55,000,000 was ample for new projects and maintenance work during the ensuing year. He pointed out that this is an increase of $5,000,000 over the appropriation of last year.

The Listening Post

By CARLISLE BARGERON

WELL, sir, the National Law Enforcement Commission, whether it does anything else, will go down in history as the greatest martyr of the ages.

Only a few weeks ago it was being mauled from every source, manhandled by the drys because it would not make a report and subsequently treated contemptuously by the wets because it let the drys stampede it into making one. And did not open its mouth in defense? Did it make one complaint at the utter unfairness of it?

No, it just sat there with that air of righteousness, comforted in realization that sooner or later the truth would prevail.

* * * *

IT develops that instead of being the sinister agency that the drys thought because it would not make a report, or the puny, frightened bunch that the wets thought when the word came out that it would make one—it develops that the commission had made a report long before the hullabaloo started, that the report was right there in the President's hands all the time. And with a martyred air the commission just let the drys and the wets pummel it, turning the other cheek as fast as the one was struck.

It is all very strange but there is no escaping the facts.

There were two mimeographed reports from the commission in that batch loosened upon an unsuspecting public yesterday. Both were addressed to "Mr. President."

AND in the left-hand corner at the bottom of the first one was this: "Dated November 21, 1929." The commission didn't just put the date down there. That might not have attracted attention. No, sir; the word "dated" was there, too.

Then in that second report the commission frequently referred to that first report it had made to Mr Hoover on November 21, 1929.

Now doesn't that upset Senator Harris and those others who rushed into print, to say nothing of us newspaper men?

And yet it is hard to understand, even yet. Right in the midst of the hullabaloo that was stirred up over the holidays it was learned, and there could be no questioning the source of information, that the President's information was that the commission was "ready" to report, has been for several weeks, if only Congress would create a joint congressional committee so it would have somebody to report to.

HOW strange it is that this could have been the President's information when, according to the date on the report he must have had it with him at the time.

Of course, the report will be judged and is important in its relation to the habits and destinies of men, but Senator Harris and those others who rushed into print, and we newspaper men, do not like to be put in this light. It is all so strange.

Now come on, commission, let's be frank and earnest about this business. "You be Frank and we'll be Earnest."

revealed an obstruction in the ureter at the juncture with the kidney. An exploratory operation, wherein surgery was not necessary, was performed last Wednesday, but failed to dislodge the stone.

After several days under observation at the hospital, where the retired champion and Mrs. Tunney, herself a veteran of two major operations within the past year, had engaged a suite, the operation was decided upon this morning and performed at 2 p. m. No necessity was found either for touching or removing the kidney.

An exceptionally deep incision was necessary to penetrate the thick muscles of Tunney's heavily developed back, but a slight incision in the ureter revealed the obstruction. A jagged edged stone, about the size of a bean, was removed. The operation was over and the patient coming out of ether at 2:25 p. m.

The former champion laughed on the operating table as the ether cone was placed over his face, and he thought of the newspapermen gathered in the lobby below.

"The best front-page story for the reporters," he said, "would be, 'Tunney Passed Out on the Table.'"

Gene smiled as he was about to be wheeled from the suite to the operating room, took the hand of his wife and said, "Don't worry, dear; everything will be O. K."

He asked the anesthetist, Dr. Samuel Buchanan, "Just how do you want me to breathe?" and was given the necessary instructions. He had no difficulty taking the gas, oxygen and ether used by the surgeon.

Tunney first suffered pains in his back during the trip home from a lengthy honeymoon in Italy with Mrs. Tunney. He told reporters on arrival that seasickness "knocked him out" for four days and had resulted in a touch of intestinal influenza. Later attacks finally disclosed the need for an operation. Medical authorities refused to believe that the obstruction was due in any way to injuries received during Tunney's fighting career.

As an example of the former titleholder's vitality and desire for secrecy, Tunney attended a luncheon and dinner the day after his first operation, last week. He probably will be confined to the hospital for three weeks.

for the moment without participation by the Reichsbank, which could be deferred until the German government was ready to make new proposals. The German delegation met in private to consider replacing the Reichsbank by other German banks in connection with the international institution.

Premier Tardieu, when he left for Paris late tonight, took with him the texts of solutions of the questions of the date of payments of installments as well as the matter of sanctions which had finally been agreed upon during the day.

The Germans agreed to pay on the 15th of the month all sums due creditors in foreign exchange, while the Reischbank would pay the balance in marks at the end of the month.

A moratorium agreement provides that at the end of any period of moratorium the sums that became due during the period shall be immediately payable and that the special advisory committee which will pass on the necessity of a moratorium for the reich shall not have executive powers.

The terms of agreement on sanctions were withheld until they have been communicated to the governments of France and Germany, which are most directly concerned.

PALESTINE AND IRAK STUDIED BY LEAGUE

Wailing Wall Problem Gets Setback When Suggestion of Britain Is Denied.

MANDATE STIRS DEBATE

Geneva, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Palestine and Irak furnished the first flurry tonight in the deliberations of the fifty-eighth session of the council of the League of Nations which began this morning.

A proposal by Great Britain, the mandate power, to seek solution of the wailing wall controversy between Arabs and Jews through research by a special commission received a check when the permanent mandates commission reported unfavorably.

The British foreign secretary was ready to support his proposal with a long exposition of the difficulties arising out of conflicting racial and religious claims, but the council decided to postpone the subject to a sitting later this week when more time will be available.

Mandate Presents Problem.

The question of entry by Irak into the league, as advocated by Great Britain, which is also mandatory power for that ancient Biblical land, grew to importance when it was seen that it involved the new problem of how to get rid of a mandate.

Since there was no precedent for such procedure the council proceeded cautiously and asked its permanent mandates commission to advise it fully as the situation develops and the time approaches for Irak to stand on its own feet.

Foreign Secretary Henderson recalled that Britain has recommended Irak for league membership without conditions and feared there might be misinterpretations of a phrase in the report by the mandates commission which said it "would welcome the entry of Irak into the league if and when certain conditions were fulfilled."

Henderson Cites Views.

Mr. Henderson said that it was not the commission, but the assembly of the league which was solely competent to determine conditions of membership in the league by Irak and added, "in particular, they included in the list of conditions 'economic equality,' and I should like to say at once that I can not accept here now the view that any independent state on admission to the league should be required to give any guarantee on this point."

Foreign Minister Dino Grandi of Italy sitting for the first time at the council board, supported the theory that the mandates commission is competent.

$1,000,000 Donated By Ford to School

Mountain Institution Uses Gift to Construct New Buildings.

Mount Berry, Ga., Jan. 13 (A. P.). Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ford were identified today as the donors of a $1,000,000 group of four buildings at the Berry Schools, a famous Georgia educational institution for mountain boys and girls.

Announcement of the identity of the donors of the buildings, the last of which was completed a year ago, was made following exercises today commemorating the founding of the schools 28 years ago by Miss Martha Berry, daughter of a northwest Georgia farmer.

The group of buildings includes a dining room and kitchen, built at a cost of $300,000; Clara Hall, a girls' dormitory, costing $200,000; a recitation hall, and a recreation hall and gymnasium, with a laundry in its basement. The latter and the recitation hall together cost $500,000.

E. G. Liebold, general secretary to Mr. Ford, inspected the buildings today, together with H. J. Carlson, Boston, Mass., architect, who designed them, and Miss Berry.

Convict's Taylor Clew Is Pronounced Useless

Los Angeles, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—District Attorney Buron Fitts, after questioning Otis Hefner, paroled convict, who claimed he possessed a clew to the identity of the slayer of William Desmond Taylor, motion picture director, who was mysteriously killed in 1922, said here today the man had no information that either would solve the murder or lead to its solution.

REAL ESTATE FIRM TO CLOSE BUSINESS

Commercial National Co. Will Liquidate All of Its Assets.

R. G. DONALDSON IS HEAD

In announcing plans for liquidating its assets, the Commercial National Co., Inc., yesterday explained that action was being taken because the directors feel "the company can not profitably continue its dealings in real estate securities."

"During the process of liquidation of the company's assets," it was stated, "periodic distribution will be made to the stockholders, having regard, of course, to the priority of the preferred stock."

The statement to stockholders announcing the liquidation is as follows:

Organized in 1926.

"This company was organized in 1926 for the purpose of dealing in real estate securities. Thus far it has pursued the objects of its organization and has regularly paid the dividend on its preferred stock.

"But real estate conditions in the city of Washington, and, indeed, throughout the country generally, have become such that the directors feel the company can not profitably continue its dealings in real estate securities.

"Under these circumstances they deem it wise to liquidate the assets of the company, as expeditiously as conditions will warrant, in order that the stockholders' investments may be returned to them.

"With this object in view, the directors have this day directed that the stock of the company be removed from the Washington Stock exchange.

Says Investments Carefully Made.

"The directors desire to say that the company has been operating upon a most economical basis, and all of its investments carefully made.

"The company was organized without any expense, either by way of attorney's fees or organization charges, the stock was disposed of without expense, except for a small amount for newspaper announcement, and the officers and directors of the company have worked during the entire period of its existence without compensation of any kind and will continue to do so during the period of liquidation."

Officers of the company are R. Golden Donaldson, president; James B. Reynolds, James H. Baden, Laurence A. Slaughter, vice presidents; Walter J. Harrison, secretary; and Frederick H. Cox, assistant secretary. These with Hayden Johnson form the directorate.

Pensions for Aged Urged at Luncheon

Social Agencies Council Told of High Dependency Percentage.

Federal or State legisaltion providing pensions for old persons was urged yesterday by speakers at a luncheon of Council of Social Agencies, sponsored by the family welfare committee, at the Young Women's Christian Association.

Dr. John A. Ryan, of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, spoke of the need for legislation that would establish a pension fund to take care of old men and women who had no sources of income. Leifur Magnusson, United States representative of the International Labor Office, also spoke.

Miss Louise McGuire, chairman of the committee in charge, read statistics showing that there are approximately 45,000 men and women beyond 65 years of age in Washington and that 84 per cent of these are dependent upon some one or some agency.

Make no mistake about their usefulness—the set contains a total of 3,488 pages, aggregating 825,000 words of text, which, in the larger library form, on more expensive paper, people will soon be paying $10 to own. All you have to do is sign and mail the special blank—WITHOUT DELAY! To put off ordering this course may mean that you will not be able to get a set for this astoundingly low price. Just 10,000 sets—they will disappear fast!

More than 250,000 sets of this 60-volume edition of our HIGH SCHOOL EDUCATIONAL COURSE have been sold at $2.98 per set postpaid, more than a quarter of a million! These have gone to ambitious people everywhere in the United States and Canada, and to many foreign countries. These people continually write us such expressions of approval as, "I am pleased with the books—they are so simple, interesting and easy to understand"; or, "Congratulations on the set of books, containing the elements of a High School Education; I admire my set very much."

You must act quickly if you, too, want a set of these valuable and useful books. Cut out the blank while you think of it—if you put it off you may forget it, and you will lose this last chance to get this HIGH SCHOOL EDUCATIONAL COURSE postpaid to your address for $2.98, payment in full. (13) Who was the Roman god of war?

(14) What were the three orders of Greek architecture?

(15) What chiefly caused the U. S. Civil War?

All of these questions, and hundreds of others, are understandably answered in this 60-volume Educational Course, totaling some 825,000 words of text—and the price of 60 books is only $2.98, payable in full. This price includes the postage to your address. At such an amazingly low cost, can you honestly afford to be without a set of books which promises to be so useful and valuable to you?

Grab This Chance to Get a 60-Volume High School Course for Only $2.98, Full Payment!

NOW you can fill in those embarrassing gaps in your knowledge. Here, in 60 handy volumes which fit your pocket or handbag, you can get the essentials of the usual High School Education for only $2.98. This is positively all you pay—if you use the special order blank below before our remaining 10,000 sets are gone.

What do the words "A High School Education" mean? They mean a thorough grounding in those essentials of modern knowledge which enable a person to be the most efficient in the everyday activities of his work and of his contact with others. When it is required that a person have a High School Education, it is meant that such a person must be equpiped with a substantial background of English, History, General Literature, some Languages, Commercial Subjects (Business and Economics), Mathematics, Science and the Arts. It is expected that such a person will have his intelligence alert and trained to enable him to learn new things readily, to know where to look for facts not already in his possession; in short, to be a man or a woman aware of those fundamentals which form the basis of every education and of all culture.

Probably you have often felt the lack of knowledge you really ought to have at your command. Perhaps you did not get the most out of your school days, or possibly you were obliged to leave school before you had completed your education. Or your High School training has slipped into the past, and you are "rusty" on many subjects. Whatever the reason for the lack, you feel that the void is there—and you want to fill in the gaps! This 60-volume HIGH SCHOOL EDUCATIONAL COURSE is just the thing for you—it is comprehensive, easily understandable, thoroughly reliable and authentic, and absolutely up to date.

Whether you wish to study High School Subjects for the first time, or whether you merely wish to review your High School Education, you will find these 60 books exactly what you need. Read the list of titles carefully as listed at the right—and remember, all you pay for all 60 of these splendid books is two dollars and ninety-eight cents!

A word about this astonishing low cost—the price of $2.98 for all 60 of these books is possible, has been possible, because of mass production. These books have been bought by more than 250,000 people. The popularity of these books is irrefutable indication that they are filling a widespread need. Indeed, the price is so low that many people get the set just to have the books handy for reference. At such a price no one can afford to be without these books. In usual library form they would cost perhaps $25; in the new 2-volume cloth edition they will cost $10—but you can get the same material, word for word, in 60 pocket-sized volumes, for only $2.98 postpaid! But remember—10,000 sets are all we have. You must not delay a moment! Grab this chance NOW!

Five Cents Per Subject Until January 31, 1930

You get 60 books for $2.98 as long as these 10,000 remaining sets last! This is slightly less than five cents per book—can you imagine any book treating, in a text of 15,000 words (the total words in each of these books, on the average), a subject like Grammar or Economics or U. S. History, that is not worth five cents? This High School Educational Course, in this 60-volume handy edition, is a bargain of bargains. There is nothing like it anywhere. It is unique in the field of popular education.

The authors of these sixty educational volumes were especially chosen to prepare these works so that the average person may readily assimilate their contents. In spite of the sensationally low cost of these books, they have been written by authorities in their various fields. Some of the writers who have helped to make this High School Educational Course possible are:

Professor Carroll Lane Fenton, of the University of Cincinnati; John Cowper Powys, famous lecturer and critic; Joseph McCabe, world famous scholar and author of 180 books; Lawrence A. Barrett, High School instructor of Mathematics; John S. Gambs, High School teacher; Maynard Shipley, President of the Science League of America; Lloyd E. Smith, former college English assistant; Hereward Carrington, New York scientist; J. Geo. Frederick, commercial expert; Dr. Isaac Goldberg, well known critic; Murray Sheehan, educator and novelist; Leo Markun, research student; Nelson Antrim Crawford, well known writer; Clarence Darrow, famous lawyer, etc., etc.

Thus, it is certain that every one of these books is of outstanding excellence. As a reading course this set cannot be surpassed—for the price of $2.98 you get 825,000 words of text, nearly a million words! The general editorship has been under the direction of E. Haldeman-Julius, famous for his campaigns of popular education and providing good reading at a price within reach of every one's pocketbook.

Amazing as it sounds it is quite true that $2.98 is full and final payment for all 60 of the books in this High School Educational Course. There are no strings attached to this offer—$2.98 is all you pay. Think how expensive a High School education usually is in comparison—here you get 60 books for no more than one average textbook costs in school. And you dispense with the instructor altogether, you become your own teacher, learning as you read.

We pay the postage to your address on this 60-volume set. The price of $2.98 includes all charges except the small C. O. D. fee (exactly seven cents), which goes to the U. S. post office. All packing and carriage charge are otherwise fully paid. You can avoid any possible delay or inconvenience (C. O. D. packages sometimes move slower than regular parcel post, and if you are not home when the package is first delivered it may cause you a little inconvenience) by remitting $2.98 with your order. Satisfied customers everywhere guarantee the value of this set of books. You are assured of satisfaction—when you see the books you will be convinced that they are worth the bargain price of $2.98.

However, send no money with the order unless you wish to. We shall be glad to send the books C. O. D. if you prefer. Just mail the blank and pay the postman on delivery. Prompt service guaranteed.

Ten Extra Volumes

During our campaign for self-education, with our 60-volume HIGH SCHOOL EDUCATIONAL COURSE, we are including 10 additional volumes with each set—the set originally contained only 50 volumes—at no extra cost to the public. This is an indication of our intention to give every purchaser of this course full value for the money he invests in these books. Now 60 volumes make up this complete course, as listed at the extreme right of this advertisement. Notice how thoroughly comprehensive they are, and what a surprising variety of subject matter they cover. Yet the price is only $2.98 for all sixty books—surely this is a bargain if there ever was one. Understand this clearly—$2.98 is all you pay; there are no monthly installments, no further payments whatever. When you pay $2.98 this set of books becomes yours, fully paid for. All you have to do is use the blank before our small supply of 10,000 sets is exhausted. We strongly urge you to act at once—otherwise, you may be disappointed. You have no time to lose. Mail the blank today.

Easy to Understand

TEXTBOOKS are often dry and musty. This Educational Course will be found refreshingly different from the usual educational volume. Every book has been written with the reader constantly in mind. Every page is clear and readily understandable by the average person. No attempt is spared to provide books which every one can use to learn without the aid of an instructor.

Every book in this 60-volume set is self-teaching—that is the plan that underlies them all, to make no instructor necessary. Of course, the books are of no value unless you read them with the determination to learn. There is no royal road to knowledge just by letting your eyes run idly over the printed page! But if you have real ambition, then these are books to help you get ahead—these are books which may be of more genuine benefit to you than all four years of formal High School training.

The simplicity of these books is truly amazing. You will be gratified to find them entirely lucid in every way. No subject is kept difficult—all are presented to you so that you can get the most out of them. Just reading these books is educative to an extent that you cannot realize unless you try the experiment! Furthemore, every volume is interesting. The type is of a size to make reading easy. The authors have been interested in their subjects, and this makes it certain that those subjects are presented in a delightfully fascinating manner.

What makes some textbooks difficult for the ordinary reader is that essential facts have been left out—such facts to be supplied by the teacher. In this Educational Course every fact is inserted in the text. With attention and determination a thorough grasp can be had of the subjects represented in this course (see the complete list at the right.) It is not necessary to ask questions—every question has been foreseen and already answered by the writers who have made this set a marvel of clearness and completeness.

The actual size of the type used in these books (except the reference dictionaries) is 8-point; this is approximately the size type used in your daily newspaper. It is easy to read. Many of the books have illustrations and diagrams to make the text clearer. The books are uniformly bound in stiff covers; they are substantial and neat in appearance. The paper is good white book paper. Each book contains, as a rule, about 15,000 words, or 64 pages.

Variety of Subjects

CONSIDER for a moment the wide scope of these sixty books—think just how comprehensive they are! There are 825,000 words in these sixty volumes. They include a wonderful variety of subjects, from history and economics and literature to mathematics, foreign languages and the arts. Even commercial subjects, such as geography and typewriting, are included. You get a substantial foundation in the arts, and an insight into the great world of science. Then there are the handy reference volumes, the alphabetical dictionaries, which give you concise information just when you need it and exactly as you want it.

Four foreign languages—the languages which most English-speaking people desire to learn—are given in this set. These foreign languages are self-teaching in these handy volumes. They may be readily grasped with the aid of these books.

Everything you need is here—this series is compact and complete in itself. There are two volumes of questions and answers (quizzes) with which you may test your knowledge from time to time. There is that excellent general treatise on "How to Study"—this work alone is really worth the entire price of the set in the valuable hints it gives and in the manner in which it enables the average person to study in such a way that he will get the most possible good out of his efforts.

You will find it invaluable to have at hand many of these books which you may not use at first. Though some of the subjects may seem to you apart from your present interests, they will sooner or later come in handy. Every one, today, should have a representative library of reference to which he can turn in search of facts when he requires them. In our modern civilization, with the miracles of modern printing, knowledge is within every one's reach. There is no longer any excuse for any individual to remain in ignorance. Lack of knowledge is not tolerated. Today you must be progressively alert—keep abreast of the times—and maintain a standard of education that is on a par with the knowledge of your fellows.

Vice President Is Entertained By Bachelors

Cotillion Is Attended by Many Dignitaries at Mayflower.

The presence of the Vice President and many dignitaries, foreign and domestic, gave official cachet to the second bachelors' cotillion, held last evening at the Mayflower, which was one of the most brilliant and colorful of the season's many balls.

The arrival of Vice President Curtis and his party was attended by considerable ceremony. He was escorted to his box by Brig. Gen. William E. Horton, president of the Bachelors, with members of the floor committee forming a double aisle through which the group made their way as the orchestra played patriotic airs.

The Vice President's guests in his box were Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose with whom he dined preceding the cotillion, other members of her dinner party including Mr. and Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, the Minister of Persia, Mirza Davoud Khan Meftah, Gen. Horton, the Commercial Counselor of the British Embassy and Lady Broderick and the latter's sister, Mrs. Patrick Tabor; Col. and Mrs. Henry Morrow, Maj. and Mrs. Raymond E. Lee, Mrs. Hayne Ellis, Mr. and Mrs. Wilton J. Lambert, Mrs. Thomas F. Walsh and Mr. Walter Davidge. Mr. and Mrs. Harold Smoot joined the group at the ball.

Mrs. Gann stood at the head of the receiving line, with Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenburg, Lady Broderick, Mrs. George H. Calvert, jr., and Mrs. Karl D. Klemm.

Gen. Horton's usual task of directing the figures was taken over by Mr. George H. Calvert, jr., and Maj. Reginald Forster, the general leading the cotillion with Miss Junia Culbertson, debutante daughter of the United States Ambassador to Chile and Mrs. William S. Culbertson.

The figures were charming and there was a touch of dramatic effectiveness when, flashlights having been distributed as favors, the lights were dimmed and firefly flashes were turned on the Stars and Stripes and the vice presidential flag decking the Vice President's box. The other fa-

Shopping with Bab

DEAREST GENEVIEVE:

If you start your shopping early this morning you will encounter some of the best buys you have seen for many a long day. Reduction sales are reaching that interesting period when prices are down as low as they will be, and articles of merchandise have been added which you hardly expected to be able to secure at such ridiculously low figures.

Aside from that there are interesting first arrivals in Southern wear and spring modes which will entrance you with their fresh beauty and crisp, new features.

Pasternak Offers You Today

—selections from the remaining gowns and furs, ensembles and hats at prices so low that your sense of economy will demand that you purchase several models immediately. Look through the collection of evening gowns, for instance, and you will scarcely be able to comprehend that such handsome creations have been marked at such a low figure.

Spring modes are arriving, too, and if you contemplate a trip to Florida or Bermuda or other Southern clime you will be happy to know that charming costumes for tropical wear await your inspection at Pasternak's, 1219 Connecticut avenue.

—in the window at Underwood & Underwood's this week. If you stop by to see it, you will observe that it was made from an ordinarily sized photograph which stands in the window beside it. That is one of the important services which you are able to secure in this famous studio. You may take an old photograph, print, tin-type or what-not and have it reproduced and copied with deft corrections and improvements in any form you choose.

Paintings and miniatures are done by a portrait artist who has a permanent studio in Underwood & Underwood's. The colors in the gown in the portrait displayed this week, the flesh tints and likeness are done so expertly, that it can not help but command your attention and admiration.

This would be a good time for you to go through your photographs and old pictures, and select those you would like made in a more attractive style. The charge for this work is not as high as you might expect.

Schwartz Has Gowns on Sale

—at $16.75 each. These are attractive crepes in all the newest colorings, and in the sweet little fashions you like in your occasional frocks.

Schwartz, 1325 Connecticut avenue, since removal to this new location, has an important following of new patrons, besides the hundreds of customers, who have appreciated his selections for a long time.

There are more expensive models in the showings at Schwartz, but you will be especially impressed by the frocks priced at $16.75.

For the rest of the news on shopping for today, you must depend on your own investigations, for this is all I can tell you at this moment, strange as it may seem.

Affectionately,

Bab

It slips on and off easily.

It may be laundered at a moment's notice for it is a one-piece affair with extensions that cross at back and button in suspender styling.

You could cut several out at one time. You'll find them mighty handy to have around. They make a most acceptable gift for the church bazaar in colorful prints.

To make it means practically bind edges and stitch pockets in place.

Design No. 8150 comes in sizes small, medium and large. In the medium size, 2 yards of 36-inch material with 5¼ yards of binding is sufficient to make it.

Sateen in orchid and purple with binding of bias purple sateen to match the print is illustrated.

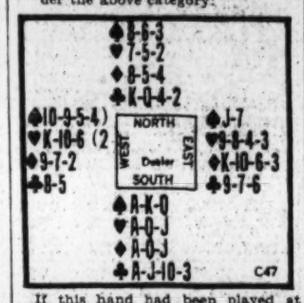
WORK'S BRIDGE

BRIDGERS.
Important Notice!

Beginning Monday, January 27, Mr. Milton C. Work, the international authority, will conduct in this department for two weeks a great Home Bridge Contest. You will find it of intense interest and wonderfully instructive. It will enable you to test and increase your knowledge of Auction and Contract and contest informally with members of your household and friends. Remember the date—January 27th. Challenge your friends.

MISPLAYED HANDS I HAVE MET.

I NOTED recently the following, which may or may not come under the above category:



If this hand had been played at Auction, South would have been the Declarer with a contract of one No Trump; but the hand was played at Contract and South, with a count of 28 and every suit stopped twice, started by bidding four No Trumps to suggest that a slam was in the cards if North could render any assistance. North bid five Clubs to show that he had either the King and Queen or the Ace; that bid, after South's request for slam information, did not indicate length in the Club suit. As South held the Club Ace, he knew that North had the King and Queen and so had at least two entries; on the strength of that, South risked a small slam bid in No Trumps.

In the play, which would have been the same at Auction, a Spade was led. South won and led the Ace of Clubs, playing the Deuce from dummy. To trick 3, South led the Jack of Clubs, overtaking with dummy's Queen; and then led a Heart from dummy, finessing in closed hand. West won and led another Spade. South took this trick and, there being but one adverse Club left, led the Ten and overtook with dummy's King. Dummy then led a Diamond and South finessed; when this finesse won, South led the Trey of Clubs which Dummy won with the Four, and a second successful Diamond finesse followed which produced the small slam.

Was this play perfect?

The Correct Play.

Declarer's play was perfect, but if West had ducked trick 3, the Declarer doubtless would have been set, as probably he then would have used a second Club entry for a second Heart finesse which would have lost, and he would not have had two Club entries left for the needed two Diamond finesses.

The question of the hand is whether the Club play on tricks 1 and 2 should have indicated to West dummy's need of entries and whether West would have been justified in passing the first Heart trick.

Wonders of Air Gliding

II. SCHULZ SETS A RECORD.

IN August, 1922, Ferdinand Schulz set a new world's record for gliding. In a plane with no motor, he flew from one hill to another, then back and forth without landing, for an hour.

Before this flight by Schulz, those who made glides had seldom remained aloft for more than a few minutes. Some of the glides had lasted only a few seconds.

How did this German manage to remain in the air so long? It was because he knew how to use the air currents. Winds rise when they blow against the sides of hills or mountains. Schulz "rode on the wind," as the saying goes, and when he came to a hillside, he would rise toward the top, then turn around and glide back to the other hill.

It was surely great sport. Think of a man sailing through the air like a sea gull.

The success of Schulz awakened interest all over western Europe. Glider contests were held in France, England and Belgium.

A fine gliding place was used in England, and a Frenchman named Maneyrol stayed in the air for 3 hours and 21 minutes during a contest there. Later a Belgian named Massaux flew in a glider for 10 hours and 25 minutes.

In 1925 Schulz again broke the world's record. This time he remained in the air more than 12 hours while gliding over the Crimean peninsula. Two years later he made a gliding flight in east Prussia, 14 hours and 7 minutes passing from the time he "took off" until he landed.

How would you like to glide for 14 hours and then make a safe landing? To glide is much more like true flying than to ride in a motor-driven airplane.

In later articles this week we shall make trips with some of the famous airmen who ride the wind without motor or propeller.

Dare INTERPRETS the MODE

Smart beige and black heavy tweed coat, trimmed in heavy flat black fur. (Courtesy of Joseph Paquin, Paris.)

Paris, Jan. 13.

"WHAT, satin coats in winter!" With a rueful glance from me in petit gris to La Chic Secretaire in beaver.

"But, yes," responds the adorable little Mme Helm, "women never really care about weather when they are lovely."

And what's more, we know she is right!

So, that being that, we find that satin coats are ever so smart for evening ensembles—a dress of velvet and a coat of matching satin, and nothing spared in the way of fur trimming—neither imagination or expense.

Women, God bless 'em, have always been that way. Fur coats in the summer, chiffon and satin in the winter, while men cuddle liver in their great-coats and mufflers. And the mortality is no higher from colds and penumonia and what-not among women than it is among men.

So there must be something to it after all.

We just love tweed coats—that is, tweed coats of Joseph Paquin inspiration, which have such smart lines as the one we illustrated for you today.

It was very heavy, this tweed, and beige and black—and then just to be more unusual it was trimmed sparingly with flat black fur. Nice?

The Couturiers.

* * * *

Honestly, we had the most fun with this leaflet. We had to make all the gadgets before we told you about them, and one is a hatstand made of any empty milk bottle—and, well, they don't have milk bottles in France.

Anyhow, it was fun, and we evolved some darling hatstands, which don't topple over, out of these empty milk bottles and dolls' heads. And then we made a novel and really good looking shoebag, which hangs in a closet and keeps your evening slippers from contact with each other and other slippers as well. And last, but certainly not least, footstools out of empty 1-pound coffee cans, and stools to sit upon out of the 2-pound cans.

You'll have just as much fun with them as we did, so send the stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare Department of The Washington Post for the illustrated leaflet.

Maybe you didn't, but we did, so there. In my estimation there just never will be anything as elegant and as effective in its simplicity as white collars and cuffs.

Georgette, lace, chiffon, satin, and even velvet they are, appearing as usual on the simplest but most expensive robes.

A bit large, the collars are, as a rule—and the cuffs have unexpected ways of appearing at the elbow or peeping under an already finished cuff of the material.

Then, you know, there's the weekly Dare fashion letter in The Sunday Washington Post each week.

"Step Out of Line" Talk Will Be Given in Church

Miss Margaret Slattery, of Boston, will speak at 4:45 o'clock this afternoon at the First Congregational Church on the subject, "Step Out of Line," in continuation of a series of talks she is making this week to women and girls. She will speak Wednesday on the subject, "The Sixth Commandment and the Modern Girl."

"There is no such thing as excitement," she told an audience yesterday. "So many of us know not what it is to be quiet. Something is always pounding at our door, so that when we are quiet for a moment it almost hurts and makes us weak within. But when there is no chance for stillness, there is no chance for greatness. No tree ever grew to great stature crowded in among other trees."

Prices realised on Swift & Co. sales of carcass beef in Washington, D. C., for week ending Saturday, January 11, 1930, on shipments sold out ranged from 15.34 cents to 24.00 cents per pound and averaged 21.32 cents per pound.—Adv.

What Today Means to You

"CAPRICORN."

IF January 14 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 1:30 p. m. to 2:30 p. m., from 6 p. m. to 7 p. m., and from 10:30 p. m. to 11:30 p. m. The danger periods are from 10:30 a. m. to 11:30 a. m. and from 4 p. m. to 5:15 p. m.

The stars do not shine benignly upon those who wish to court or marry. Conditions are favorable for commerce and business, but you are threatened with trouble and perplexities through pleasures and from those of the opposite sex.

The child born on this January 14 will have its initiative destroyed by too much coddling. If allowed it will be inclined to shirk responsibilities. Precept and environment, the two powerful formative influences, will make or break its chances for a full and happy life.

If you are a January 14 person, you belong among the alleged 10 per cent who are fired with the desire for experiences out of the common rut. You are tempted by the mountain path that skirts the precipice rather than the level road that winds through the valley. You feel that the world is your oyster. You are destined for an adventurous life, one which will be as full of failures as successes, and which will bring as many griefs as joys. You stretch your hand out eagerly and grasp your opportunities, caring nothing for the thorns and stings, if the prize is worth them. You are not content to dream your dreams, but you translate them into action.

If you be a man, you do not turn your back on anything because it is risky, "not nice," or dirty, if it is expedient for you to do it. You have a sincere respect for honest labor and you are not guided by what the other fellow may think. You do not want a "cushy" job.

You are kind-hearted, constant and secretive. You talk very little about yourself or your own affairs and are only a ready conversationalist among your intimate friends.

Wives of Tomorrow

By FRANCES M'DONALD

DEAR MISS McDONALD: Being a constant reader of your column, I have decided that no better advice can be obtained than the advice you give to the young of the world of today. There are several points worrying me and I shall ask them as they pop into my mind.

I come from a "well-fixed" family and have the most generous father and mother. Three years ago I met a young man four years my senior. At that time I was young and trying my best to be obedient to my parents. I would not let any one entice me to step out with them, even though I did care for him. He tried to take me out and in every way to date me up, but I was too bashful and shy to accept.

When I started to step out I went several steps higher than I should have. I started to smoke, then drink, then stay out late as possible seven nights a week at dances or parties or on joy rides.

I loved this man from the start, but tried to hide it. He asked me to stop drinking and smoking, which I did. Then he got tired of being hung on the door-step. I coaxed my parents to let me bring him in. Finally I had their consent.

We have been going together for over a year, but now he is a mystery to me. When we are out he is wonderful; doesn't look at another girl. Everybody tells me from seeing us together that he surely cares for me in an upright way. Then when we are alone he is a different man. He says if only we could keep on, always be like lovers. I question him and then he won't answer; only says we can live in hope, maybe there will be a chance. What does all this mean?

He has never taken me to his home (although I have often asked him), telling me I would be out of place. Another mystery for me to solve.

Lately he sees me less frequently. Why? I don't know. He never forgets to question my friends about me. He is still true to me, never goes with another girl. He is always willing to tell me where he spends his time. I love him dearly, have given up many a thing for him, pass wonderful opportunities. I have done everything he asked me just for the man's love.

I am considered good looking, dress exceptionally well and I am very popular. When the crowd gives a big outing I am always chosen as hostess. They never forget me, but I am willing to give up all the pleasures of life that I should be enjoying for a man. Doesn't he realize what I am doing? Or is he losing his love for me? I have gone far enough to win him, but would still go further.

What can I do to hold him? Can I really win him and hold him as before? He has made a different girl out of me, and he could change the world for me. He is always on my mind. He has faults but I can't recognize them as my love for him is too strong.

They say love finds a way? Does it? Maybe I am asking too much of you but I hope not, as I have never before confided in any one. Your advice will be greatly appreciated and followed. May I please see this in print?

HEART-SICK BESSIE.

Why heart-sick, Bessie? The boy seems very much in earnest but just a little blue. No doubt his home may not seem to him to measure up to yours. But that means very little since his instincts are right. So just be cheerful and helpful and do nothing to shatter his ideals.

Some day when he finds a big "raise" in his pay envelope all the big mystery will be cleared away. Meanwhile just be glad that you have found a man that you can respect, and one whose whole heart seems centered in your little self. What more could any girl ask?

asks this very haughty lady.

But if she weren't so used to associating style with extravagance she'd know that BROOKS is a store on G St. near 11th . . . a store where really smart women find the latest things in apparel and accessories at prices that are always sensible! We beg the "haughty lady" to come in and get acquainted.

GAS FIRM ORDERED TO PARE RESERVES

Depreciation Accrual Rate Is Cut 10 Cents on Each 1,000 Cubic Feet.

BUS TRIPS APPROVED

The Public Utilities Commission yesterday ordered the Washington Gas Light Co. to cease accruing a reserve for depreciation and maintenance at the rate of 12 cents per 1,000 cubic feet of gas consumed.

Hereafter, the commission ordered, the company will set aside 2 cents per 1,000 cubic feet of gas consumed for depreciation.

Cost of maintenance, the commission ruled, is to be taken entirely out of operating revenues as an operating expense.

The commission's order was formulated at an executive session, at which various other matters also were considered. The question of accrual of depreciation and maintenance funds by the gas company was the subject of a public hearing recently. The company has been setting aside 12 cents for each 1,000 cubic feet of gas consumed for several years.

New Accounting Policy.

The question was raised before by previous utilities commissions, but nothing definite was done about the matter, and the practice was continued.

The order issued by the commission yesterday is not necessarily a reflection on the company, but is in line with the present commission's policy of compelling utilities to adhere to fundamental principles in their accounting systems.

Street car conductors of the Washington Railway & Electric Co. have for some time been issuing transfers to the cross-town Park road bus line of the company after buses have ceased operating. Persons getting the transfers stood about until they were tired waiting for buses. The commission yesterday ordered the company to make two more bus trips from the end of its Mount Pleasant street car line one at 11:30 and the other at 11:45 o'clock at night to care for transfer passengers.

Motor Bus Runs Approved.

The Capital Traction Co. was authorized to run motor buses from Chevy Chase to the Washington and D. A. R. auditoriums whenever there are affairs at either place.

The Utilities Commission forwarded to the District Commissioners a formal certificate of "convenience and necessity" for the erection of an addition to the pumping station of the gas company plant at Blair road and Butternut street northwest.

The action was necessary because the pumping station is in conflict with the zoning of the neighborhood.

Tickets to Bal Boheme Go on Sale Tomorrow

Tickets for the annual Bal Boheme, to be held at the Willard Hotel next Monday, will be placed on sale tomorrow at the Carlton, Mayflower, Willard and Wardman Park Hotels, according to an announcement by Mrs. John Otto Johnson, chairman of the executive committee.

The city-wide distribution of the 85 art posters—all executed by Washington art students—will take place this week under the direction of Mrs. John F. Gaynor.

Behind the Screens

With NELSON B. BELL

IT is estimated by those in a position to know that the next year will witness a diminution of the number of pictures released by a full 25 per cent—and this with the studios working on the tightest and most exacting schedules they have ever attempted to put in operation. The development of sound is given as the major cause.

This does not by any means indicate a shortage in the motion picture houses. Extended runs of pictures representing a vastly improved average of excellence and the elimination of many theaters that were found incapable of being adapted to the sound policy have brought about the determination to make fewer pictures, although the length of time needed to produce satisfactory dialogue subjects and the need of unremitting concentration both in preparation and execution of the new type of entertainment both have a bearing on the situation.

The extended run aspect of the matter finds convenient exemplification right here in the Capital. Houses that never dared attempt longer than a week's presentation of any picture, no matter how good it seemed to be, are running their major features "as long as they will stand up"—one, two, or perhaps three, four or five weeks.

Playing dates have been correspondingly lengthened in the neighborhood theaters. Outlying amusement places that formerly changed bill four or five times a week, are now content with three and sometimes only two changes. The daily change houses are becoming two and three day run houses.

Naturally, fewer pictures are required and those that are presented are much more enjoyed by those who appreciate the amplified attractiveness of product painstakingly made. The industry do move.

Mr., Miss or Mrs. (as the case may be) W. W. W.: Well, now that you've read the review of "Christina," what say, eh?

You may, or may not, have noticed: That Roscoe Karns is doubling in town this week, being prominently cast both in "New York Nights," at the Palace, and "This Thing Called Love," at the Rialto.

That the newsreels are more than ordinarily interesting this week, what with John D. Rockefeller revealing himself as an articulate and robust old gentleman, Secretary Stimson explaining what the London Arms Limitation Conference is all about—"between" five nations, incidentally—an exhibition of fancy skating and one thing and another.

That Alexander Callam, at the Fox, masters ceremonies without undue flourish, fanfare or wisecracking, relying on a splendid barytone voice to "put him over"—which it does.

That this is one of those rare weeks in the local picture emporia when it is next to impossible to make a mistake, all of the programs being an ample money's worth—with one possible exception, and I am not at all sure about that.

Another big money name was linked with the Fox financial situation in last week's rumor market, according to the Motion Picture News. Since the trusteeship was formed a few weeks ago, no less than seven important financing interests have been named as assuming current Fox obligations. George Eastman has now been added to the ever-growing list, which to date includes Henry Ford, Fisher Brothers, William Randolph Hearst, RKO, Westinghouse and A. T. & T.

I presume the rumor is without body, except as it pertains to the Fisher Brothers!

Joseph M. Schenck, president of United Artists, is credited with the statement that Al Jolson will receive more than twice as much from U. A. as he did from the Warner Brothers as a talking and singing star.

Panic? What panic?

Harry Richman, who doesn't seem to be getting on so fast as Mr. Clara Bow, is making his first stage appearance since going into pictures at the head of a stage show playing the Brooklyn Paramount. He supplanted Rudy Vallee, the well-known weeping willow, who has shifted to the New York Paramount. Not that it matters.

Max Schmeling, German heavyweight boxer, with whom Mr. Dempsey intimates he might be induced to push and haul, is appearing in a talker, "The Boxer and the Lady," being made at a Berlin studio. He is doing a little better than "Gentleman Jim" Corbett, at that. One of Jim's early stage vehicles was called "The Burglar and the Lady."

It's a girl at the home of Jack Alicote, formerly of this trustworthy family journal and now publisher of the Film Daily. Ours, too, Jack.

I see by the papers that Mark Hellinger, of the New York Mirror, explains that George M. Cohan—appearing at the National, incidentally—waited for the Technicolor process to be perfected before signing with the flickers so that the American flag would look right!

Whether you care for Norma Talmadge as a talking scren star or not, you will want to see John Wray in "New York Nights" and Dave Schooler in "Eton Days," so you might as well stop arguing about it. "Eton Days," Schooler—it's a system.

It seems to me there was something else, but I am late already!

Eleven Planes Burned In Flying School Fire

Wichita, Kans., Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Eleven airplanes went up in flames and loss of approximately $90,000 resulted from fire which destroyed the Administration Building and hangar at the Braley Flying School today.

The fire started in the engine room, apparently from an explosion.

TWO KILLERS OF DRY OFFICER SENTENCED

One Marylander Gets Life Term, Another 15 Years for Fatal Shooting.

MOUNTAIN FUED HINTED

Special to The Washington Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 13.—Charles Lewis, Thurmont, was found guilty of murder in the first degree and Leslie Clark, Hagerstown, of second degree murder, growing out of the fatal shooting of Deputy Sheriff Clyde L. Hauver, of Frederick County, during the raid upon a moonshine still in the mountains near Thurmont July 31 last.

Lewis was immediately sentenced to life imprisonment and Clark to 15 years in the Maryland penitentiary. Neither had any comment when Chief Judge D. Lindley Sloan rendered the verdict and sentenced them.

The pair was tried jointly before Judge Sloan and Associate Judges Frank G. Wagaman and Albert A. Doub, their counsel choosing a trial before the court rather than a jury. The case was removed from Frederick County, the defense contending it could not receive a fair verdict there.

The trial was complete about three weeks ago, but, according to Judge Sloan, the court was delayed in securing surveys and photographs of the immediate vicinity of the ambuscade on account of the snow and that he had been prevented from coming here last week due to sitting on the Maryland Court of Appeals.

The trial was one of the most sensational held here in many years, requiring five days, with three night sessions. Clark, who had named Lewis as the man who killed Hauver, when he was arrested, changed his testimony when placed upon the stand and said that he and Lewis were some distance away when they heard the shots fired, and had no part in the shooting. The State contended that Lewis fired the fatal shot, intending to kill another deputy, whom he disliked because of a previous moonshine raid, but the bullet struck Hauver.

Lewis, who is a prominent resident of Thurmont, was defended by his uncle, former district attorney, Samuel Lewis.

RUSH TO ENTER POST $20,000 OPPORTUNITY CAMPAIGN OPENS

"Until further notice my headquarters are right here on the fifth floor of The Washington Post building and I'm engaged in the process of giving away twelve automobiles and sixteen radios, to say nothing of an unlimited amount of cash commissions. How would you like to have a brand-new eight-cylinder Cadillac sedan—a Nash, Auburn, Peerless, Dodge, Chrysler, Graham, Pontiac, Chevrolet, or Ford sedan? Yes, sir. All of these are being awarded as prizes in the great circulation campaign of The Washington Post which starts today.

"In addition I am offering a total of sixteen Atwater-Kent and Majestic radios and cash commissions for a little part-time effort in securing subscriptions for The Post.

"Work, my dear man; remember that my name is Opportunity. Gamble and Chance are no relatives of mine. I reward those who deserve to be rewarded on their own merits. If you care to compete for this magnificent Cadillac motor car or any of the other prizes, you may be assured that you will be on an equal footing with all other candidates.

"Let me introduce you to the campaign manager. He will tell you just how to enter this thrilling race and to secure the subscriptions that will count for thousands of votes toward securing one of these wonderful prizes.

"No, I can't help you any further. My job is only to bring this wonderful offer to your attention. The rest depends upon your own energy and initiative. I'll have to leave you now and get acquainted with some more of these people who are answering my knock."

To judge by the number of men and women who entered The Post $20,000 Opportunity Campaign yesterday, the people of Washington and nearby Maryland and Virginia recognize "Opportunity" when they see him. They have walked right in, taken him by the hand and announced that they were going to be in line a few weeks hence when these twelve automobiles and sixteen radios will be distributed.

The campaign is formally inaugurated today, but there have been no restrictions placed upon those who wished to get an early start. For that reason it is important that all those who intend to participate immediately announce the fact, send in their nomination blanks and start in collecting the votes that will bring them such rich reward.

The contest has been carefully planned to give equal opportunity to all, regardless of their place of residence. The City of Washington has been divided into five districts and the out-of-town territory into three in order to assure an even distribution of prizes. In addition, everyone, no matter in what district he may reside, is entitled to compete for the six higher priced automobiles which represent the major prizes.

Awards will be based entirely on the number of votes secured in accordance with the schedule of subscription values printed elsewhere in this paper. The person polling the highest number of votes will receive the Cadillac Sedan, the second highest the Nash Sedan, and so on in direct relation to the value of the motor car.

After the six major prizes have been distributed and also the six division prize automobiles, the highest candidate in each of the five city districts will receive a $168 Kiel table model Atwater Kent radio, and the highest scoring candidate in each of the three out-of-town districts will receive a $167.50 Majestic radio. The second highest candidate in each of the eight districts, both city and out-of-town, will be presented with a $116.50 Majestic radio.

All candidates who secure a qualifying number of subscriptions will participate in the distribution of cash commissions and it is therefore evident that this is a contest in which "every one wins."

The Washington Post is one of the country's greatest newspapers, universally recognized for the character of its editorial content and the exclusive quality of its numerous features. It is a newspaper that constantly exercises its influence toward the welfare of the communities which it serves, and consequently requires only an introduction to be welcomed in every home.

It has been determined to make this introduction and it seems that our regular readers, who are acquainted with Post policies, can best perform the ceremony. In order to recognize their services this method has been introduced because of the spirit, and pleasure, of wholesome competition which it will foster and because it makes possible the award of worth-while prizes—all of which have been purchased through local agencies.

Lone Marine Rescued From Skiff in Atlantic

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 13.—Rescued from what shipping men deemed almost inevitable death in the Atlantic, William Larson, of South Port, N. C., who on last Friday was carried adrift in a small skiff from his fishing shack, and for whom shore stations and Coast Guard cutters have been searching ever since, this afternoon was safe aboard the steamer Ivy Olsen.

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 20 years, and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, just a healing, soothing vegetable laxative safe and pleasant.

No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They help cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth"—bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver—constipation, you should find quick, sure and pleasant results from one or two of Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets.

Thousands take them every night to keep right. Try them, 15c, 30c, 60c.

While You Are Shopping

. . . . so are we

Advertising plays an important part in the purchases we make. Home wants are built from advertised items, and suggestions for the house and for all members of the family come from these daily reminders of wares the stores have to offer.

Because of the intimate nature of these purchases it is important that all advertising ring true. Merchants are watching their offerings with constant vigilance. They want to be sure that the relationship between you and their store is not marred by even an unintentional misrepresentation in their advertising.

Mingled with the throngs who fill the stores are shoppers from the Better Business Bureau. They are not detectives. They are not trying to find fault. They are helping the salespeople and the stores to serve you accurately and properly by analyzing and reporting just what the buying-public experience when they respond to advertising.

Winchester Plant Is Prey of Flames

$250,000 Damage Inflicted on Lee Baking Firm by Blaze.

Special to The Washington Post.

Winchester, Va., Jan. 13.—Damage approximating $250,000 was done today by fire breaking out under the roof of a three-story brick building, housing the plant of the Lee Baking Corporation. The loss was covered partly by insurance, according to John Whetzell, local manager. Flames had gained considerable headway before being discovered between an old roof and a new one 3 feet above it, and were spreading downward through stairways and an elevator shaft. A defective electric motor was thought responsible.

A fire wall prevented spread of flames to an adjoining building and other property menaced, in a thickly congested area, was saved by firemen, who battled four hours with the fire.

Pedestrians saw flames shooting from under the roof before bakery employes knew of the fire. Additional damage was done to stock, machinery and ovens by water. Several carloads of flour had just been stored in the plant. Mr. Whetzell said the outer walls appeared intact.

The company is a subsidiary of a large Southern baking combination, with headquarters in Atlanta, Ga., and acquired four Shenandoah Valley plants of the Beck Baking Corporation about two years ago.

A NEW AGE OF LUBRICATION BEGINS WITH THIS NEW MOTOR OIL CHARACTERISTIC:

"Penetrative Lubricity"*

CONOCO Alone Has this New Characteristic

Since the discovery of the wheel, lubrication has been a necessity and a problem. The first rude barrows which pre-historic men built, needed lubrication. Since their axles were of wood, an occasional wetting with water often sufficed. This "wetting" did not last long, however, and one of the brighter tribesmen began rubbing the axles of his primitive cart with raw animal meat. Variations of this practice continued well into the sixteenth century because there was little real need for better lubrication of wood-on-wood surfaces.

With Watt's invention of the steam engine in 1763, metal-on-metal friction resulted. Then it was that animal and vegetable oil lubricants became definitely unsatisfactory. Their tendency to leave corrosive deposits ruled them out.

Mineral Oils Are Discovered

After the first oil well was drilled in 1859, mineral oils became commercially successful. Because petroleum was plentiful and was freer from gumming and corroding tendencies it rapidly supplanted animal and vegetable oils.

Since 1901 there have been practically no changes of fundamental importance in refining motor oils.

Now since 1901, think of the changes that have been made in motors! Probably the make of car you drive today was not even manufactured in 1901. Certainly its needs for oil are far more exacting!

The Development of Germ Process to Meet this Need

Foreseeing that ordinary mineral oils would eventually fail to meet the increasing strains put upon them by improved motor design, Wells and Southcombe, two British scientists, began a study of the problem which occupied 16 years. The result of their efforts was the isolation of the Germ Essence—a property that provides increased "oiliness" when introduced into mineral oils. These processes were protected with basic patents, and Continental acquired them exclusively for North America. Thus Continental brings you the first and only fundamentally better oil of the century!

Germ Process and Penetrative Lubricity

The Germ Process adds one startling characteristic to CONOCO Germ-Processed Oils. It enables them to penetrate metal surfaces! This means that an enduring oil film actually penetrates cylinder walls, bearings, etc., and clings under all conditions. In starting, when 40% to 60% of motor wear occurs....in speeding, when any failure of the film is fatal to motor life, remember this—the permanence of this film precludes any possibility of metal abrasion. The germ-essence naturally adds greater "oiliness" and we call that lubricity. So we have Penetrative Lubricity as the outstanding characteristic of this new oil.

When will you begin using CONOCO Germ-Processed Motor Oil?

How to Keep Well

By DR. W. A. EVANS

To the limit of space, questions pertaining to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual disease.

EATING HIGH-SEASONED FOODS.

S. R. asks for a discussion of the effects of high seasonings or condiments, such as strong peppers, mustards, &c., on the digestive organs or health of the human race.

Physicians generally are of the opinion that eating foods heavily doused with condiments is responsible for most of the cirrhosis of the liver not caused by drinking alcoholic beverages. The opinion has been offered that to get rid of this trouble it will be necessary to prohibit the use of red hot condiments, as well as that of alcoholic beverages, and, in each case, to make prohibition work.

Whatever the nature of the liver or gall bladder trouble, the liver subdiance suffers. We speak of gall stones and gall bladder infections as though the disease were limited to the gall bladder. Many an operation on this structure has failed to give the complete relief expected because the liver itself was crippled and there was no way by which that crippled organ could be surgically treated.

In all gall bladder, and gallstone cases the wise physician puts his patient on a diet that is free from mustard, horseradish, pepper sauce, chili, red or black pepper and all other related condiments. Since many pickles are heavily flavored with essential oils and condiments, they, too, are barred. Pickles that contain little or none of such flavors are harmless enough.

If it be true that men who are trying to get on with crippled livers must avoid the use of hot seasonings, why use them in the first place? If they make a bad liver worse why give them an opportunity to make a good liver bad? Some people add them to their foods, and especially their meats, because they think them necessary for the digestion of heavy foods. Why eat a food that can not be digested unless it is doused with sauce?

However, some research work by Dr. Per Fend indicates that dousing with chills does not make digestion easy. He found that men thought it did so and thinking so does make a thing so, to a limited extent. However, aside from making them think so, it was not especially so. Eating three ounces of fresh chili a day did not increase digestion in well checked experiments.

JAUNDICE MIGHT BE CAUSE.

A reader writes: Please give your opinion on the following. Two sisters each had two children. One child of each bled to death when less than a week old. The diagnosis in both cases was "bleeders." The other two children are healthy. I know the family for five generations and there never were any bleeders among them.

REPLY.

The probability is that these children were not bleeders. They may have had jaundice, such as babies frequently have. It is a prominent cause of death in new-born babies. The blood clots poorly in jaundice.

AMERICAN U. QUINTET UPSETS CATHOLIC U., 26-19

WHAT IS AN AMATEUR, IF ANY

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—Your correspondent has no wish to complicate the great American question of what is an amateur, if any, but the reamateurization of Miss Mary K. Browne by the United States Golf Association raises some new points in the problem. Miss Browne is one of the best feminine athletes in the country and one season about half a dozen years ago she not only played through to the semi-final round of the national women's tennis tournament but also played to the final in the women's national golf championship.

But presently, Mr. C. C. Pyle, the man of vision whose visions subsequently became a nightmare of sheriffs with attachments, persuaded her to accept a guarantee of $15,000 and become a tennis professional to serve as the victim, or lady palooka, if it is not amiss to refer to a lady as a palooka, for Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen, of France.

Miss Browne thought the matter over very seriously before making up her mind, but finally she came to the conclusion that the money was more desirable than her amateur standing and therefore accepted Mr. Pyle's offer. She then toured the U. S. A. with Mr. Pyle's troupe and got her money. She also profited somewhat on the side by writing some magazine articles about her observations of Mlle. Lenglen's game and, on the whole, became about as thoroughly professional in respect to lawn tennis as it is possible for one to be.

U. S. G. A. Embarrassed But Firm.

But the next summer when Miss Browne inquired as to her status in the game of golf she was surprised and somewhat hurt to learn that in turning pro at tennis she had also forfeited her amateur standing in golf and would not be allowed to play in the national tournaments any more.

The U. S. Golf Association found itself in an embarrassing situation. It could not be argued that she had professionalized herself in golf and the worst that the golf association could say of her in its adverse ruling was something to the effect that she had deamateurized herself, which was a negative way of saying the same thing.

The wording of the rule under which it was decided to deamateurize Miss Browne was most unfortunate. It spoke of conduct detrimental to the sport of golf and when this rule was quoted in connection with the official decree of deamateurization there were many indignant protests by the friends of Miss Browne, who is a person of considerable charm and gentle conduct on and off.

Refuses to Argue Matter Further.

There was something about the ruling which seemed to suggest that the lady defendant was accused of unladylike or unsporting deportment and, of course, the golf association had no intention to imply any such thing. This merely happened to be the only rule under which a lady who had turned pro in another sport could be declared no amateur in golf, and the golf association was able to quiet the criticism only by refusing to argue the matter any further.

But now that she has been reinstated in golf, on the petition of Miss Glenna Collett and 50 other ranking lady golfers, Miss Browne's case suggests strange possibilities. For instance, Mr. Jack Dempsey, the retired pugilist, might wish to enlarge his intellect and, after a course of preparatory studies, might enroll at Princeton University as an undergraduate.

Consistent with the U. S. G. A.'s decree of reamateurization in the case of Miss Mary K. Browne, Mr. Dempsey could command recognition as an amateur in intercollegiate football because he could easily prove that he never made any more money playing intercollegiate football than Miss Browne made at golf.

Sonnenberg Might Join A. A. U.

Mr. Gus Sonnenberg, the wrestling champion, late of Dartmouth College and Detroit University, by the same reasoning, would be eligible to enroll in the A. A. U. as an amateur boxer because he has never done any boxing for hire, and would be at liberty to enter the ring in the golfden gloves tournament, for instance, and maltreat all the other heavyweights in the show.

Many formidable intellects have tried to analyze amateurism in American athletics and there have been almost as many analyses as studies of the problem. The tendency has been, however, to regard a person who is a professional in any one sport as a professional athlete and I am quite sure that if Miss Browne were to enroll at one of the large State universities she would be held to be ineligible for the archery team, the daisy chain, the golf, swimming, rifle and basket ball teams on the ground that when she signed Mr. Pyles' pay roll, she signed away her amateurism.

Some of the young men who figure in the athletic troubles of the University of Iowa last year were prose-

Shute Retains Golf Lead On Coast

Horton Smith Trails Ohioan's 222 in $10,000 Open.

Cruickshank Is Third; Armour Is Within Range of Top.

By RUSSEL J. NEWLAND.

RIVIERA COUNTRY CLUB, Los Angeles, Calif., Jan. 13 (A.P.).—While the gallery followed in the footsteps of the golfing elite today, Denny Shute, young and little known pro from Columbus, Ohio, strikes his way over Riviera's picturesque course to retain an important if not impressive lead at the end of the third round of the 72-hole $10,000 Los Angeles open championship.

After two years in the professional ranks, Shute and his total of 222 showed the way to the greatest figure in the game. Possessing neither flash nor dash, the slender Ohioan went around the par 71 layout in 75. His previous rounds were 73-74. Today he was out in 37 and in in 38, each nine being two over par.

Three strokes behind Shute followed two of the tournament's favorites, Horton Smith, of Joplin, Mo., and Bobby Cruickshank, of New York. Cruickshank came in with 74 and Smith took 76 to reach the 225 strokes station.

Armour in Reach Of Top.

Within striking distance for top money were Tommy Armour, Detroit; Al Espinosa, Chicago, and Chet Beer, of Bakersfield, Calif., all in the 227 class.

The rest of the field was scattered from 228 strokes well into the 240s. The end of the third round saw five notables of the game practically out of the running so far as first money went. Leo Diegel, of Agua Caliente, Mexico, P. G. A. champion, marked time with a total of 228, while MacDonald Smith, of Long Island, New York winner of the title for the last two years, had a 230 to show for his efforts.

First place money was out of reach of Harry Cooper, of Buffalo, N. Y., first Los Angeles open titleholder, Johnny Farrell, of St. Augustine, Fla., former National open champion and Bill Mehlhorn, of New York, another veteran. Cooper chalked up a three round total of 232; Farrell has 233 and Mehlhorn a 241.

Poor first or second rounds, due to exceptionally bad weather Friday and Sunday, spelled their doom.

Only One Score Equals Par for Course.

Despite fair weather today and a fairly dry course to shoot over, only one entrant was able to equal par. Honors went to MacDonald Smith, who went out in 38, but stroked his way to a brilliant 33, three under par on the incoming stretch. It was the second time that par had been equalled or bettered during the present tourney. In the first round Johnny Rogers, of Denver, conquered driving rain and strong winds to come home with a 70. Except for MacDonald Smith's low score and sub par nine, the round was without thrills for the gallery of several hundred persons.

Tomorrow's final 18, however, is expected to bring out a golfing race with Shute seeking to maintain his

The George Washington-Hampden Sidney basket ball game scheduled for tomorrow night at the Virginians' court has been canceled owing to midyear examinations at Hampden-Sidney, which require the full attention of the players. Thus George Washington's road schedule this week is reduced to two games, which will be played with Randolph-Macon, at Ashland, Va., on Thursday night and Virginia Medical College, at Richmond, on Friday night.

Annapolis' Alarm Ends When Plebe Crew, Lost In Fog, Strikes Shore

Special to The Washington Post.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Jan. 13.—Shrieking sirens and tooting horns announcing something amiss in this town this afternoon were stilled after two hours of noise with the news that a plebe crew of the Naval Academy, which had been lost in a fog that blanketed the river, was safely ashore at a point 3 miles above the academy.

One of a group of three plebe boats which had been practicing starts during the mild weather, the lost boat was the last of the trio to start back to the academy when the sudden fog enveloped the river. The alarm was sounded by academy officials after the arrival of the other two boats.

With bearings lost and rowing aimlessly in the thick atmosphere, the nine midshipmen in the boat finally put into Joyces Landing, 3 miles above the academy, as luck directed the prow of the shell to land. The clatter in the town ceased when academy officials were advised by telephone that the crew was safely ashore and the shell moored for the night.

NAVY'S GAME WITH MD. U. DOUBTFUL

Middie Grid Schedule Can Not Be Altered Despite Conflict.

Special to The Washington Post.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Jan. 13.—Because of the misunderstanding between Commander Jonas H. Ingram, director of athletics at the Naval Academy, and H. C. Byrd, who occupies a like post at the University of Maryland, the football game between Navy and Maryland for next season is seriously threatened, it developed today following a conference between the two officials.

Maryland was listed to play at Annapolis November 1, under Navy's schedule announced Saturday. A conflict of dates soon was noted, in that Maryland, it appears, had booked a Southern Conference game with University of Virginia. The understanding of the Old Liners was, it is said, that the Navy game would be on November 22. West Virginia Wesleyan holds this date on Navy's schedule.

Commander Ingram said tonight that both sides probably are to blame for the misunderstanding, but that Navy can not disrupt its schedule by vitiating any existing contracts. So it would appear up to the Maryland management whether its schedule could be revised, at the same time satisfying Virginia, in order to bring about the Navy clash.

British Open Qualifying On 2 Courses in June

New York, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Qualifying rounds for the British open golf championship will be played June 16 and 17 over the courses of the Hoylake and Wallasey Clubs, 3 miles apart in Cheshire. Selection of these courses, near Liverpool, was announced today by H. H. Ramsay, chairman of the championship committee of the United States Golf Association, on receipt of word from the Royal and Ancient Golf Club of St. Andrews, governing body of British golf.

Ruth, at "St. Pete," Won't Talk Baseball

St. Petersburg, Fla., Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Babe Ruth, king of swat, stepped off a train here today from New York, and in less than an hour was out on the golf links polishing up his game. He declined to make any comment on the question of salary or anything pertaining to baseball.

Accompanied by his wife, the big Bambino went immediately to his hotel. Then they donned their golf togs and went to one of the country clubs here for a round on the links. Ruth said he planned to stay here until Wednesday and then go to Miami for the Mandell-Quintero fight.

Cue Play-Off for 4th Won by Tiff Denton

New York, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Tiff Denton, Kansas City veteran, defeated Augie Kieckhefer, of Chicago, 50 to 40 tonight in a play-off of a tie for fourth place in the National three-cushion billiards championship tournament. Denton's victory automatically qualified him for the national tournament next year.

The Kansas City star gave a brilliant exhibition to turn back Kieckhefer. With the score favoring him at 21-20, Denton ran seven and then a few innings later compiled his high run of ten to take an apparent safe lead. Kieckhefer, however, kept pecking away with one or two billiards an inning until he had cut Denton's lead to 41-38. Denton then rallied for three billiards, followed this with five, and then ran out the match in the fifty-first inning.

Tomorrow night, Ott Reiselt, of Philadelphia and Allan Hall, of St. Louis, will play a 50-point match to decide their tie for second place in the tournament won last week by Johnny Layton, of St. Louis.

Reds Set First Division as 1930 Goal

Meusel and Heilmann Add Punch; Club in New Hands.

Cuccinello, .358 Hitter, Fine Prospect at Third Base.

This is another of a series of stories dealing with 1930 prospects of major league baseball clubs.

By JOHN A. BABB.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Prospects of the Cincinnati Reds landing in the first division in the 1930 campaign appeared brighter as club officials line up the players for spring training after a disastrous 1929 season.

New faces on the bench, new faces on the field and a new face in the president's chair present a picture which stirs the imagination of the most critical. Sidney Weil, wealthy young Cincinnati business man, purchased control of the club at the close of the 1929 campaign and was elected president.

His first move was to sign Dan Howley, who piloted the St. Louis Browns last year, as manager. The Browns under Howley's guidance finished two games out of third place, with a team batting average of .276, while the Reds, with .281, were seventh. The teams fielded on a par and, though the Browns had better pitching, Weil believes an added scoring punch will make Red moundsmen show better.

Average of 6 Fly-hawks Above .300.

With this in mind, Weil bought Harry Heilmann, Detroit outfielder, who hit .344 last year; Bob Meusel, Yankee outfielder, who took more than one-fourth of his hits in extra bases and 10 per cent in home runs, and Earl Webb, from Los Angeles.

This trio, with Evar Swanson, Curt Walker and Ethan Allen, Red regulars, will make the outfield. Heilmann, Meusel and Swanson probably will carry the burden. The hitting average of the six is above .300.

Tony Cuccinello, who batted .358 in the American Association for Columbus last year, will be given a trial at third base and will get the assignment over Joe Stripp and Charley Dressen if he delivers. Horace Ford at short, Hughie Critz at second and George Kelly at first, last year's regulars, undoubtedly will retain their posts. Harry Riconda, Kansas City third sacker, who hit .320 last year, and Clarke E. Pittenger will serve as utility.

Campbell, Frey, Johnson Add Box Strength.

Additions to the pitching staff, led by Red Lucas, are Archie Campbell, former Yankee and National, who showed the way to American Association hurlers in a St. Paul uniform last year; Bennie Frey, Nashville recruit, and Si Johnson, recalled from Columbus. Jakie May, Pete Donohue, Ray Kolp, Eppa Rixey, Kanneth Ash, Rube Ehrhardt, Marvin Guda and Adolfo Luque make up the remainder of the pitching staff.

Johnny Gooch and Clyde Sukeforth again will divide the catching burden.

Hockey Team Refuses $25,000 Bid for Star

New York, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—A record offer of $25,000 by the New York Rangers of the National Hockey League for Hec Kilrea, star wingman, of the Ottawa Senators, has failed to induce the Ottawa Club to part with the player, Col. John S. Hammond, president of the Rangers, announced today.

1930 A. A. U. Marathon To Be Held in New York

New York, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Contenders for the national marathon championship will do their running thos year on an island. Arrangements for holding the Amateur Athletic union distance classic March 23 in Silver Lake Park, Staten Island, N. Y., have been officially sanctioned by the metropolitan association, it was announced today.

The Boston Athletic Association hitherto has run the event as an annual Patriots' Day feature.

The election of five new members on the board of governors to serve for the ensuing three years, was announced as follows: Ray P. Garrity, J. Webster Manning, Charles W. Schafer, Charles H. Zeller and S. D. Willis.

Athletics Abandon Martinsburg Team

Special to The Washington Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 13.—Although the Philadelphia Athletics meeting in annual session in Philadelphia today decided against continuing the operation as a farm of the Martinsburg Club of the Blue Ridge League, hope is still held out here that the A's will father the locals during the coming season.

Lewis H. Thompson, local president, in expressing regret at the action of the world's champions, said he believed some working agreement could be reached between the two clubs which would enable Martinsburg and Philadelphia to continue relations.

The A's took over the Martinsburg franchise a year ago and acted as the club's big league godfather for several years previously. Earl Mack, one of Connie's sons, formerly managed Martinsburg.

COACH PICKS G. U. RELAY TEAM

O'Reilly Names Three Sophomores to Run at Brooklyn.

THREE members of last year's freshmen relay team were picked yesterday by Coach John D. O'Reilly to run on the Georgetown varsity relay team in the Brooklyn College indoor track and field meet Saturday night at Brooklyn. The trio are Artie Briggs, Victor Burke and Chuck Carlin.

These three, accompanied by John Cranley, veteran of the 1928-1929 varsity four, will compete against several of the best mile quartets in the East. Dartmouth, intercollegiate indoor champion; New York University, Pennsylvania, Colgate, Syracuse, and Holy Cross probably will be in the field.

Announcing his selections following time trials on the Hilltop board track, Coach O'Reilly stated he was deeply impressed by the speed and form shown. This coming from the astute Hilltop mentor prompts the prediction that the Blue and Gray team will acquit itself creditably in its debut.

Cranley's Showing Pleasing.

Cranley's showing was especially pleasing to O'Reilly and Georgetown followers because the veteran evidenced no trace of the foot ailment that hampered his running last year. Providing he escapes a recurrence of the trouble, he is expected to compile a successful record this winter.

Burke, Briggs and Carlin appear to be fulfilling the promise they held as future varsity performers last season. They are strong and possessed of great endurance.

Tomorrow O'Reilly will pick the Georgetown representative for the Brooklyn College Thousand, the feature event of the meet. Capt. Larry Milstead is vying for the nomination with Jack Mara, John Downing and Jay Julicher.

Wildermuth Faces New Test.

While the relay and 1,000-yard events occupy important places on the program, the Olympic sprit series in which Karl Wildermuth will compete, attracts the greatest interest. Three of the speediest runners in collegiate ranks will meet in this affair. Jack Elder, Notre Dame's joint-holder of the 60-yard indoor record of 6 1-5 seconds, and Jimmy Daley, intercollegiate and amateur indoor sprint king of Holy Cross, will match strides with the Hilltop flyer who holds the intercollegiate outdoor 100-yard title.

Conn. Wesleyans Sign Oberlander as Coach

Columbus, Ohio, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Jim Oberlander, All-American half back at Dartmouth in 1925 and assistant football coach at Ohio State University for the last three seasons, has been signed as head coach at Connecticut Wesleyan University, it became known here today.

Oberlander has been assistant coach for the last three years at Ohio State University. During the 1929 season he handled the line and back field at the Ohio institution under Head Coach Williman.

At Dartmouth he played tackle on the varsity in his sophomore year and then was shifted to full back, where his performance was outstanding. In 1925 he was named on practically every All-American team. Coach Wood resigned to complete his theological studies at Yale.

School Baseballers Open Season April 29

Interhigh baseball will open its season on April 29, the Tuesday following the return of students to schools after the Easter holidays, it was announced yesterday. As in the past, each school will meet the other four in one game, ten frays comprising the complete schedule. Unless other plans are made, the series will again be staged at the Eastern High School Stadium.

One difficulty is revealed in the announcement of the 1930 schedule. Western and Eastern have been listed to meet on May 30, Decoration Day, but, according to John Paul Collins, athletic director of Eastern, the game will be changed to some later date. It has been a tradition of the high schools to play no game on holidays in the past, and for this reason the game of May 30 will be shifted.

Company F Winner As Costinet Stars

Three games in the Montgomery County League last night saw the Maryland Collegians, Takoma Fire Department, and the Company F Fives returned the winners. The outstanding feature of the night was the performance of Costinet, of Company F Five, who scored twelve field goals and three foul tosses for 27 points to prove the whole show of his team's 36-20 victory over the Hyattsville Methodists.

Eagles Ahead From Start To Finish

Inspired Five Led to Victory by Woods and Olsen.

Close Guarding Holds Cardinals to Five Field Goals.

By JACK ESPEY.

American University's basket ball fortunes, which sank as low as wartime rubles when four regular players drew suspensions a week ago, soared to dizzy heights last night as the reorganized Eagle Quintet defeated the Catholic University Cardinals in a distinct upset, 26 to 19, in the Brookland Gymnasium.

Thus, American accomplished what it threatened to do against the dope in its game with George Washington last Friday. In that battle Coach Young's hastily formed team came within seven points of winning when it had been supposed G. W. would run away with the game. Last night the dope took a memorable shellacking.

Thus, too, American registered its first victory over a Catholic five in the Brookland Gynasium after four years of unavailing effort. Also, the result marked American's return to the win column after three straight losses this season. It was Catholic's fourth defeat in a row.

The Eagles won decisively, flashing superiority in every department. They took an early lead against the Cardinal second-stringers and more than held their own against the varsity. At the intermission the score was American, 12; Catholic, 6.

Leading the American attack was the reh-haired pepper-pot, George Olsen, sophomore guard, who was thrust into the captaincy when four of his varsity teammates were ruled ineligible last week. Directing almost every move of his team like a seasoned veteran and meanwhile hitting the loop with consistency, this youth played one of the most brilliant individual games ever witnessed on the Brookland court.

Olsen collected a total of 11 points and blanked all three of the Cardinal forwards to whom he was assigned at different stages of the game. First Reilly, then Peifer and finally Clemons were sent in against him, but none could get past him for a clear shot.

SHARKEY-SCOTT BOUT AT MIAMI GAINING IN FAVOR

Briton's Right To Match Is Upheld

Englishman Must Be Eliminated, Opine Fight Followers.

Feeling Also Unanimous That Sailor Will Be Winner.

By NED BROWN.

NEW YORK, Jan. 13 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—According to most of the wiseacres along cauliflower row, the matching of Jack Sharkey with Phil Scott, was the "logical" thing to do "at this time." Practically every man I asked about the match agreed that this was so. And while the opinion was unanimous that Scott is the man who must be eliminated before either Sharkey or Schmeling could gain a clear title to the championship of the world, it also was unanimously agreed that Sharkey would be returned the winner when he meets the English champion in Miami next February 27.

In answer to the question, "What do you think of the Sharkey and Scott match?" Dan Morgan, an astute observer if ever there was one replied:

"Well, I'll tell you; Scott might have a chance if they can keep him from looking at Sharkey before the fight begins. You know, Sharkey has a habit of scowling at you, something like John L. Sullivan had, and sort of searing all the fight out of you. I mean to say, out of a fellow like Scott.

Two Most Scientific In the Game.

"They're the two most scientific boxers in the game today, that's certain, and if Scott doesn't let Sharkey outglare him he'll hit Mr. Sharkey with many a left to the snoot. Then again, I have an idea that Scott will take many of Sharkey's punches without folding up, like you seem to expect that he will.

"Now, if they's only put blinkers on Scott, like they use on race horses, when he goes to weigh in, and keep him blindfolded during the time the referee is handing out his instructions, so Scott can't come under the baleful influence of the Sharkey glare, there might be a surprise sprung in that Miami fight. They have a saying in England about a man standing by his guns. Well, I think Scott will stand by his guns in this fight with Sharkey.

"You know, Sharkey can box well, too, and all those fellows who know how to box, like to show off; they like to show the public how much they know. And if Sharkey tries to make a boxing match out of this he'll be up against a pretty tough proposition in Scott."

Only Logical Match, Runyon Opines.

"Olb is right—de blinkers. I like it," said Issy.

Damon Runyon opined the bout was the only logical match in sight right now, and ventured the guess that the battle will draw a half million gate.

Jimmy Jenkins believes that Scott "seems to get better as the fight goes on," but put little credence in the psychological angle. He pointed out that when Sharkey tried to work the old glare on young Stribling, the Georgian returned the stare and asked freshly: "What are you looking at?"

"I was just looking to see if your heart was beating," replied Sharkey.

"It's beating all right, and it'll be beating in the ring, there, too," came back Stribling. Sharkey turned away with a grin and remarked:

"No use trying to put the old glare on that guy."

Sharkey Best Against Light Heavies.

Vince Treanor pointed out that Sharkey always could beat a light-heavyweight, but that he frequently had his troubles with a regular heavyweight. Vince recalled that Loughran was merely a fattened-up light-heavyweight at the time he met Sharkey.

Nat Fleischer, editor and publisher of The Ring, pointed out that the heavyweight champion of every country that boasts such a commodity, asset or liability, as you prefer, must be eliminated before any one man can stand out as the world's champion. In justifying the selection of Scott as an opponent of Sharkey, Nat said:

"Belgium has its champion, Pierre Charles; Norway has Otto Von Porat; Spain has Paulino; South America has Campolo; England has Scott; Germany has Schmeling, and here in America we have Sharkey.

"Now, Scott defeated Charles; he got the decision over Campolo, and won from Von Porat on a foul. The point is, however, that technically he eliminated the champions of three other countries, and this entitles him to go on and try to eliminate the remaining two. Paulino was eliminated by Schmeling. That leaves Schmeling, Sharkey and Scott to fight it out. The winner of the Scott and Sharkey fight, naturally, is the man Schmeling must beat or be beaten by—to settle the world's title.

"True enough, Scott may be up there through a series of flukes, if you will, but he's there and must be eliminated."

That sounds fair enough, but the thing that burns us up, is so many of the boys allege they think Scott has a good chance to beat Sharkey. Even Tommy Burns gives Scott a chance, although Tommy sicks in Tuffy Griffith as the man he thinks eventually will take 'em all.

And so goes it—the old ballyhoo! A week ago Scott didn't have a chance with Sharkey. Now, with the match made, the boys aren't so sure, and I'll gamble that by the time the fight comes off there'll be a lot of people betting their money on Scott. Fans are funny that way.

ON THE SIDELINES by BRIAN BELL

EAST is East and West is West, but some of the best golfers in the country will see each coast of Florida when they finish their California chores and move East and South for the big winter events. Mississippi and North Carolina, too, will claim a place in the golf sun.

Attractive purses have been provided for the professionals at Miami, Pensacola, Jacksonville, Fort Myers and St. Petersburg, but the amateurs who play for love of the game and cups will have their share of entertainments also. The first big event for the simon pures will be the battle of champions at St. Augustine January 13 to 18 for the Walter J. Travis Memorial Trophy. A player must be a champion to enter. He need not be much of a champion, but a title, no matter how insignificant, is necessary. At that, a champion of a little club, not known outside the neighborhood, may win and put his home on the golf map.

Florida will offer events for men and women at Palm Beach and Ormond Beach, and the Dixie amateur championship will be played at Miami and the East Coast women's at St. Augustine.

Pan-American championships for both men and women will be decided at Biloxi, Miss., in January.

Pinehurst, N. C., will take a prominent place in the picture in March and April with the North and South open, North and South amateur and North and South women's championships.

WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY, St. Louis, has started out with high hopes of scoring impressive basket ball victories over rivals in both the Missouri Valley and Big Six Conferences. Much of the optimism is caused by the remarkable scoring record compiled last year by Ed (Moose) Meyer from the position of center.

Meyers scored 228 points in eighteen major games and in seven Missouri Valley conference contests was credited with 185 points.

BEN CHAPMAN, who may or may not play third base for the 1930 edition of the New York Yankees, celebrated his birthday and Christmas in a New York Hospital. Chapman was 21 years of age on Christmas Day and two days before he traveled from his Alabama home to New York to have a troublesome appendix removed. Many American Association fans believe that Chapman and Dusty Cooke, a hard hitting outfielder who moves up with Chapman from St. Paul, will step right into regular places with the former world champions.

Cooke, a North Carolina boy, is only a few months older than Chapman. They were teammates on the Asheville Club of the South Atlantic Association in 1928 and moved together to St. Paul in 1929.

It may be a bit hard to maintain the twin arrangement with the Yankees.

HIGH LIFE, showing startling improvement over recent race, slipped through on inside and was up to win in last stride. BUNTHORNE, outrun early part, finished with a rush. GRABBAG had plenty of speed, but tired right at end. FLAPDOODLE was in close quarters and suffered much interference. TOMMY TICKLE quit. GOLD BET ran a poor race.

TURQUOISE was much the best. He rushed to the front, set fast pace and held BLACK DANCER safe. Latter, far back early part, finished with a rush. WARBLER, on outside, finished fast. The HUGUENOT could not get to the front. FIRE OPAL had no chance with the start. PETER and SEMPER FELIX were both left.

SAINTS 20-15 VICTIMS OF EASTERN

St. John's Five Minus Captain; Guyon Uses 16 Men.

EASTERN HIGH'S seemingly inexhaustible number of players proved too much for the St. John's basket ball team yesterday as the cadets went down to a 20-15 defeat in the Lincoln Park gymnasium. Throughout the fray, Coach Guyon used 16 players in defeating the Vermont Avenue five.

The losers were handicapped by the absence of their captain, Augusterfer, who was out of the line-up because of temporary scholastic difficulties at the school. However, he is expected to return to his team before the end of the week.

Although three complete Eastern teams took part in the triumph, but seven of the players could score, with "Midgets" Kessler and Finneran leading the way. Both of the half-pints scored twice from the floor, while Kessler added another point from the foul line. Shirley, regular guard, also came through with four points by virtue of two field goals.

Morris led the losers with six points with a pair of field goals and a like number of free tosses.

American Five Lists Loyola Here Saturday

American University has adedd a third game to its list for this week in arranging to meet Loyola, of Baltimore, at the Massachusetts Avenue Heights Gymnasium Saturday night. First scheduled a month ago, this contest was called off when it was thought that classroom work of the Eagles would preclude their playing on the date in question. The obstacle was removed, however, and the American court schedule thus gained an attractive feature.

Dunbar Tossers Take Second Win of Season

Dunbar's tossers scored their second win of the season yesterday, defeating the Shiloh Five, 26 to 18, at the Dunbar Gym. Second stringers started the game for the winners, but gave way later to the regular team.

Bland and Howard led the Dunbar Team with 6 points each, although both were outscored by Cheeks, of the losers, who registered four field goals for 8 points. Dunbar got off to an early lead and was never headed.

G. U. Prep Five in Debut Against Central Today

Central High, idle in the interhigh court series today, will not be inactive, being scheduled to meet the Georgetown Prep Five at the Garrett Park Gymnasium at 3:15 p. m. It will be the first game of the season for Eddie Brooks' charges.

However, it is rumored that Capt. Robinson of Georgetown University Prep will lead a formidable array of courtmen against the high school lads. Among those to play against Central will be John ("Buddy") Monk, center, who last year saw service in that position for Coach Coggins' team. Murphy, Grinnan and Heekin will be the remaining three to start against the Blue and White.

In other games Landon will meet Sherwood, while the Woodward Juniors will tackle Friends.

School Fives Below Caliber Of Past Years, Says Kelley

Quality of Play in Series Under Standard With Central, Tech and Eastern Teams Inferior to Predecessors.

By MIKE KELLEY
(Eastern High School Coach).

RESULTS of the interhigh basket ball contests waged thus far, bear out the feeling existing among the critics before the season, that the race was to be a general free-for-all, with every team in the league capable of wearing the mantle of the champion. Despite the fact that Eastern has dropped both its starts to Central and Western, the margin of victory in each case, 4 points, doesn't seem to indicate that the winners were so much stronger than Eastern that a similar verdict would be rendered in the next meeting of these teams in the second half of the race.

To show the really slight difference between the winner and the loser in the games last week, results indicate that one game was won by a margin of 2 points, two were decided by 4 points and one by 11 points. Central, in winning two games to place it at the top of the heap, was forced at all times by Eastern and Business and it seems a little too early to predict that the Mount Pleasant team will romp through the remaining tough games to come.

Central's Followers Rightly Jubilant.

Of course, there's consolation to the followers of the Blue and White in that no matter how small the margin of victory, the wins all look alike in the column, and jubilation reigns over the manner in which Coach Coggin's squad has handled itself under fire.

Teamwork, coolness under fire, ability to control the ball and proficiency at the free-throw mark have been the marks of Central's play thus far. Even though Cross and Rice have led the squad in the offensive end of the game, these players have proven themselves good team workers at all times.

Although the series promises to be one of the most interesting in some years, due to the even strength of the teams, the quality of play falls below the standard set in other seasons. The Central, Tech and Eastern squads of 1928, for instance, were the superiors of the present fives in general ability, with Business far above its usual strength and Western increasing its court power.

Coaches Qualifying as Cheer Leaders.

The setting for interhigh basket ball hardly leaves anything to be desired. Washington high schools are fortunate now in possessing an auditorium such as Tech has, with a seating capacity of close to 4,000, in which to stage the series games. Hundreds of dollars are saved in the interhigh school treasury that formerly went out in rents, since no school had a gym suitable for presenting this spectacle.

If the series continues to go on as it began, some of the coaches will be qualified as cheer leaders. A few more games of the Central-Business variety certainly would upset the staid dignity of more than one mentor, watching 40 minutes of as thrilling play as that game offered, and there's no doubt but that many more of that kind are due to be offered this season, judging from the strength that all the five teams have shown in action.

SHIFTED TECH QUINTET FACES WESTERN IN SERIES

Boyd to Start Johns and Talburtt

Red and White Will Tie Central With Victory Today.

Eastern Faces Elimination in Battle With Business.

A REVAMPED Tech line-up will take the floor against Western High's formidable array of courtmen this afternoon, as the high school basketers resume their league play at 3:45 o'clock, in the McKinley gymnasium. Eastern, loser in both of its starts to date, will tackle Business in the nightcap of the double-header.

Mal Johns, 1929 guard, who failed to break into action last week, will make his debut as center of the Maroon and Gray five, while George Talburtt will start in place of Lassise at one of the forward posts. The latter will be shifted to a position as running mate with Capt. Carl MacCartee, at guard. Lassise was playing good ball against Business in the opening game last week until removed near the end of the first half for four personal fouls.

Undismayed by his team's defeat at the hands of Business, Coach Artie Boyd has been drilling his charges strenously for the past week and promises a surprise to those who have been counting the Tech five out of the running since the opening reversal. The insertion of Johns is expected to add punch to the team while Lassise will undoubtedly remain in the game for a longer time today than was his fate last Tuesday.

Tech Faces Test In Western.

In meeting the Western Quintet, last year's champs will be up against another tough proposition, the Red and White Five being regarded as an especially strong contender for the 1930 title. Although Coach Moore's lads were not extended after the first few minutes of play against Eastern, nevertheless they showed signs of strength which should carry them far in the series. In Jimmy Thompson Western has one of the cleverest forwards in the series, while the all-around play of Bob Freeman at center has been of high caliber. Everett Buscher, the other forward, has also flashed form which should aid the West Enders considerably.

Should Western win, it would go into a tie with Central for the league lead, with two victories in as many starts.

Another team undiscouraged by a defeat will be in action today when Coach Lynn Woodworth lets loose his pack of Business players against Eastern. Nursing a heart-breaking 24-to-22 reversal from Central last Friday, the Orange and Blue Tossers will be out to regain their winning ways this afternoon and thus keep in the running for the championship on which their thoughts are still firmly affixed. On the other hand, Chief Guyon's charges will be faced with the necessity of wining today in order to escape virtual elimination as a contender, the Eastern Team having dropped its games to both Central and Western.

Loftus Handicapped By Boil.

One member of the Business team may be somewhat handicapped in his work today, as Pete Loftus, high-scoring guard, is suffering with a troublesome boil on the back of his neck. Loftus has been playing despite that handicap for over a week now, gamely refusing to leave his team in its struggle for the pennant. So far, he has led all the guards of the series in field goals, having dropped in five in his two games.

His teammate and captain, Natie Newman, on the other hand, may be in a slightly better condition today than he was when he faced Central. The little Stenog forward went without a wink of sleep the night before the Central game, so concerned was he with the task at hand. However, probably accustomed to the games by now, Newman has probably lost his nervousness, and should be fit to go.

The regular first team of Eastern will start the fray although Guyon intimated last night that several of his first-stringers may be benched before action has proceeded very far. In the two games only Noonan, the center, dropped in seven field goals in the two games—the highest score made by any of the team.

Knight Store Five Applies For A. A. U. Registration; Clearing of Status Is Likely

INTERCITY basket ball competition between Washington and Alexandria teams was stimulated last night by the announcement that the Knight's Store Five, of Alexandria, will make application for registration with the District A. A. U. and officials of that body indicated that the application will be accepted.

The status of the Knight's Store Team has been rather uncertain since its game more than a week ago with the Skinker Eagles. In a letter to officials of the District A. A. U., requesting that the Knight's Store Team be admitted to the organization, the manager of the team points out that his team and players received no money from the game with the Skinker Eagles, the contest having been arranged on a home-and-home basis. The Alexandria team manager explained that he and his players were not aware of any violation of the rules which would affect their amateur standing and that the return game scheduled with the Skinker Eagles has been cancelled.

Ernest E. Spitzer, secretary of the local A. A. U. organization, announced last night that a meeting of the registration committee has been called for tomorrow night. At this session all questions regarding eligibility of players and teams will be definitely settled.

Mr. Spitzer again stressed the importance of 145-pound and unlimited teams registering their players immediately. Many of them do not realize the importance of registering as soon as possible, he pointed out. It is possible that teams waiting until the last minute to register may find themselves excluded from the tournament. One or more players may be denied registration cards, and the teams depending on these players may be left short-handed after it is too late to secure and register players to replace those refused registration.

Prompt A. A. U. Registration Is Urged.

But few basket-ball players have registered, William E. Russell, registration official, reports. It is necessary for the registration official to review each individual application for registration, he points out, and if all teams intending to enter the District A. A. U. Tournament, to be held under the auspices of The Washington Post, wait until the last minute to file registration applications of their players, it may be impossible to check the applicants and issue membership cards in time for the players to be eligible for tournament play.

Teams contemplating entry into the 100, 115 and 130-pound boys' classes and the girls' and women's classes have until midnight of February 28, ten days before the tournament opens to register players. These teams should also register as early as possible, Mr. Russell suggests, in order that no teams may be disappointed at the eleventh hour by the failure of players to receive their membership cards in time to become eligible.

Individual registration application blanks may be obtained from Mr. Russell, 1808 North Capitol street, or at the sports department of The Washington Post. Team entries for all classes of the tournament will close at midnight of February 28.

Carnegie Tech Listed By Temple for 1930

Philadelphia, Jan. 13.—With the signing of John Da Grossa as head line coach, the Temple University football coaching staff is completed for the 1930 season. Heinie Miller, head coach for the past five years, will continue in the same capacity, while Bert Bell, former University of Pennsylvania back field mentor will tutor the Owl ball carriers and Da Grossa the forwards. Da Grossa was line coach at Georgetown University for four years. He is a graduate of Colgate, where he was a brilliant performer for three seasons.

Two new teams will be played by the Temple University Football aggregation next fall. They are Carnegie Tech, one of the leading elevens in the country, and Wake Forest College, of North Carolina. Other outstanding colleges on the 1930 schedule are Bucknell, Washington and Jefferson, Villanova, Lafayette and Drake University of Des Moines, Iowa, which for the past two seasons has been champion of the Missouri Valley Conference. All of the nine contests will be played in this city. The schedule:

September 27, Thiel; October 4, St. Thomas College; 11, Bucknell University; 18, Washington and Jefferson College; 25, Villanova College; November 1, Wake Forest College; 8, open; 15, Lafayette College; 22, Carnegie Tech; 29, Drake University.

TRACK HOPES HIGH AT FLORIDA

13 Lettermen Back; Knight, Newcome to Be Missed.

Special to The Washington Post.

GAINESVILLE, Fla., Jan. 13.—With thirteen letter men back, Coach Nash Higgins expects to develop another formidable track and field squad at the University of Florida. Practice commenced this week with more than 100 candidates present.

Word was received today by Mentor Higgins that two of his most brilliant performers will not likely return at the second semester, and the loss of these men, Capt. Mike Knight and Ed Newcome, will leave gaping holes in the 'Gator ranks. With Knight and Newcome on hand, Higgins feels his squad this year would be one of the most outstanding in the South. Knight has been high point man for Florida for two years, and Newcome is likewise an unusually capable athlete.

No Dual Meet Lost In Two Seasons.

However, from the group of letter men, Munger, Arnow, Bryson, Rice, Goodbread, McEwen, French, Davis, Click, Bethea, Sauls, Hall and Johnson, Coach Higgins looks for many points this spring. Among those who did not win letters last year but who are strong prospects are Waters, Proctor Sompayrac, Taylor, Hicks and Perrine. From the big freshman squad of last year, Ayres, Smith, Hall, Boyette, Small, Brownett, Forsyth, Zimmerman, Davis and Brenan are hailed as good material.

Florida has not been defeated in a dual track meet in two years, and since the coming of Nash Higgins to the State university, the sport has grown by leaps and bounds. Climaxing their season last spring after victories over Auburn, Alabama and Clemson, Florida established new Southern records in the half-mile and mile relays—bettering times that had been on the books for many years.

An international flavor has been added to the Florida track schedule in billing of the University of Havana for two afternoons of competition on March 14 and 15 at Havana, Cuba. It will be the third time a Florida Team has invaded Cuba for sports activity.

Plans are under way for the University of North Carolina to spend a week's spring training on the Florida campus, a dual meet between the 'Gators and Tarheels to top off the week's program on March 29.

A dual meet with the University of Georgia to be held at Athens, Ga., on April 10 has been scheduled, after which the 'Gators go to Atlanta for the annual Southern relays on April 12. Florida will entertain the University of Alabama here on April 17 in a dual meet. Other competitions will be arranged for Coach Higgins' men prior to their going to Birmingham, Ala., May 16 and 17 for the Southern Conference meet.

Bedford High Coach Confined to Hospital

Special to The Washington Post.

Lynchburg, Va., Jan. 13.—Glan Rardin, formerly star, four-letter athlete at Lynchburg College, now coaching at Bedford High School, is at Memorial Hospital here suffering from an infected elbow. The trouble started from an injury sustained during the holidays in a basket ball game. Rardin expects to return to his duties next week.

Penn Tossers Meet Middies Tomorrow

Special to The Washington Post.

Philadelphia, Jan. 13.—Pennsylvania's basket ball team will meet two non-league opponents this week, the Naval Academy, at Annapolis, on Wednesday, and Syracuse, at the Palestra, on Saturday. The contest with the Middies is the first of two to be played this season. A return game is listed for the Palestra on January 25. Syracuse is regarded with a great deal of respect and should prove one of the most difficult opponents McNichol's team has faced this season.

McNichol does not contemplate any changes in the line-up although there is a possibility that he will alternate the center position between Peterson and Magner, and place McNiff at guard. Three other Pennsylvania teams swing into action this week, the ice hockey team engaging New Hampshire here and the swimmers and wrestlers meeting Princeton, at Tigertown, and Franklin and Marshall, at Lancaster, respectively.

MD. CHAMPS PLAY G. U. HERE

Wash. College Five Battles Hilltoppers Tomorrow.

Special to The Washington Post.

CHESTERTOWN, Md., Jan. 13.—Beginning next Wednesday, when Washington College tossers will meet Georgetown University in Washington, the Eastern Shore Basket Ball Team will embark on a heavy schedule of games abroad that will test the mettle of Coach Tom Kibler's Maryland champions. The following night the strong Baltimore University outfit will be met and the Shoremen will then journey to Gettysburg College for the third tilt of the series on Friday. The following night Mount St. Mary's College will be engaged at Emmettsburg and the team will return here for a short rest.

Kibler believes his combination has returned to its early season form and that the apparent nervousness shown by Capt. Stanley Giraitis and his crew against Princeton in Baltimore and St. Joseph's College in Philadelphia, when Washington was trounced, has disappeared. At all events, Washington worked a smooth and fast-going game against Philadelphia College of Osteopathy last week with Dopson and Giraitis hooking them under the basket at will.

Team's Waning Confidence Restored.

The victories against Salem and Fairmount during the recent West Virginia tour strengthened the waning confidence of the team, local mentors aver, and put it in shape for the forthcoming bevy of settos. It is thought Washington has an even chance to defeat Georgetown, though the Baltimore University game is somewhat in doubt owing to the avowed strength of the Monumental City aggregation and the apparent determination of Coach Andy Anderson to eliminate Washington from the State title race.

The fact that the Maroons lost the Georgetown game by a close margin lends added interest to the Washington College meeting with the Jesuits on Wednesday, and the result may afford a basis of comparison prior to the Washington-Baltimore game. Everything points to a real struggle in Baltimore, since it will be the first State game Washington has engaged in this season and both teams will be out for blood.

Giraitis, Alexander and Dopson will be depended on to do the heavy offensive work for the locals. Hoffman and Gainer at guard and center will be ready to go into the breach as first-class substitutes. These Cumberland lads are showing up in great shape this season and are backing up varsity players in the pinches, relieving first-string men at crucial moments and adding their quota of tallies whenever thrown into the game.

Hoffman, Gainer Coming At Fast Clip.

Both are rapidly developing into forthright offensive players. When the team leaves here Wednesday morning for Washington the following men will be taken on the tour: Giraitis, Alexandar, Stevens, Dopson, Robinson, Gainer, Burk, Fitzgerald, Plummer and Ross. Giraitis and Alexander will play at forwards; Stevens, center, and Dopson and Robinson, guards, as the starting line-up against Georgetown.

Injuries sustained by Giraitis and Alexander in the Philadelphia setto have almost entirely disappeared, though the play of the two forwards was considerably slowed up for several days afterward.

West Virginia to Play Wesleyan Five Tonight

Special to The Washington Post.

Morgantown, W. Va., Jan. 13.—Husky Mountaineers and cunning Bobcats are billed for their first clash of the season here tomorrow night when the West Virginia University Basketeers will meet West Virginia Wesleyan's cagers in Mountaineer Field House. Rivalry between the Mountaineers and the Bobcats has been consistently keen since the long series of court engagements was started in 1915, and tomorrow night's game will be the twenty-sixth of that series.

The Mountaineers could have the team which started against Wesleyan last year here intact if Coach Francis Stadsvold chose to use that outfit. Capt. "Little Sleepy" Glenn and Emory Lepera were forwards. Eddie Bartrug was at center, the regular pivot man, Hagberg having been injured. Larry Plaster and George Ratcliffe were the guards. Truehart Taylor, forward, and Eddie Fox, guard, also saw service, and they, too, will be ready for action tomorrow night if needed. About the only new face that will appear against the Bobcats will be that of Eddie Cubbon, sophomore forward, who has displaced Lepera.

Lumpkin Smallest Auburn Basketer

Special to The Washington Post.

Auburn, Ala., Jan. 13.—Tom ("Little Papa") Lumpkin, sophomore forward on Auburn's hardwood quintet, is the smallest candidate out for the team. He tips the scales at 125 compared with Jack Stewart, another sophomore, and regular center, who balances the scales at 178. The seventeen players on the squad weigh 2,729 pounds.

The squad members and weights are: Capt. Louie James, 160; Jo Anderson, 165; Odis Aldridge, 154; Martin-Curvin, 168; Fluitt Fulton, 141; Ralph Jordan, 172; Tom Lumpkin, 125; Howard Lawson, 157; Roy Pate, 175; David Rogers, 171; Earl Smith, 155; Jack Stewart, 178; Earnest Stewart, 176; Vernard Vines, 160; Forney Yarbrough, 169; Lindley Hatfield, 165, and Willie Roe Tamplin, 138.

McLean A. C. Quintet Schedules 12 Contests

Twelve games, including contests with the strong Potomac Boat Club, Fredericksburg Collegians and the Petersburg (Va.) Y. M. C. A. Quints, appear on the schedule of the McLean A. C. announced by Manager Don Funk.

The McLean Team has made a creditable showing in the unlimited class court circles of Washington since organizing three years ago, despite the fact that all the players are sandlotters, now playing received any coaching in a school or elsewhere.

McLean will end its season in the District A. A. U. tournament.

The schedule:

January 16, Takoma Firemen at home; 18, Washington College at home; 23, Carlisle A. C. away; 25, Warrenton A. C. at home; 30, National Press Cards at home.

February 1, Petersburg Y's at home; 4, Fredericksburg Collegians at home; 8, Potomac Boat Club at home; 14, Fredericksburg Collegians away; 15, Petersburg Y's away; 20, game pending; 22, game pending; 26, Warrenton A. C. away.

ALEXANDRIA SPORTS

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Jan. 13.—The Richmond Light Infantry Blues, basket ball champions of Richmond, will be here tomorrow night for an engagement with the Knight's Store courtmen, in Armory Hall. The game will start at 8 o'clock.

The Richmond Blues, under the leadership of Capt. Bill Wharton, are composed of former college stars. They have played three games so far this season, winning all of them by large scores. The Knights fell before the onslaught of the Richmonders a week ago.

Two former captains of college teams will be seen with the Blues. Bill Monday, V. M. I. leader in 1929, will play a forward position, and Mike Pearman, V. P. I. captain in 1928, will play a guard. Pearman formerly played with the Old Dominion Boat Club here, and played his first game with the Blues last Saturday night. Others who will be seen with the invaders are "Onion" Jones, acting captain of the team; Bill Downey, of John Marshall High School; Smith, of William and Mary College; Powers, of St. Benedictine, and Bill Wharton, coach and captain, who has been with the Richmond aggregation for several years. "Lulu" Wellhouse is manager of the team.

The Richmonders will bring a large delegation with them. This is their first appearance on a foreign court for 1930. They play a zone defense that is very puzzling to their opponents, and are reputed to have one of the fastest clubs in the State. "Wee Willie" Powers is the high point scorer of the team.

INDIAN FIVE BUSY THIS WEEK

Randolph-Macon in First of 3 Games Listed Tonight.

WILLIAMSBURG, Jan. 13.—William and Mary's Basket Ball Team, after auspiciously beginning its campaign for the Virginia Conference title by overwhelming Hampden-Sidney, 3517, last Saturday, runs into much stiffer competition this week.

The Indians meet Randolph-Macon Tuesday night here at Williamsburg, travel to Charlottesville Thursday to engage the University of Virginia Five and play host to the strong University of Richmond quint here next Saturday night. The Yellow-Jacket and Spider tilts should have much bearing on the final outcome of the conference championship.

Randolph-Macon opens its conference session with its game here Tuesday. The Ashland Team was a strong contender for State honors last year and is expected to be equally as good this season. The Jackets, in their only start thus far, handily set back the Virginia Medical College Five last Friday.

William and Mary's game with the University of Virginia marks the revival of court relationship between the two schools. Judging from the Cavaliers' past performances, the Indians appear to be capable of offering them some stiff opposition.

The Indian Five, if it succeeds in passing these two stumbling blocks, will still have a difficult hurdle to get over, the Richmond Quint, which threw a scare into Washington and Lee's strong team before the Generals managed to obtain a 39-to-35 victory, play here in the feature home game of the William and Mary schedule Saturday. The Spiders were last year's conference champs and loom as one of the strongest teams in the loop this season.

Saturday's game is the first of the two tilts annually staged between the two age-old rivals. The Indians and the Spiders have been at each other's throats for many years and each takes unusual delight in defeating the other. The second game will be played in Richmond on February 22.

Line-up of Initial Game to Be Kept Intact.

Coach Kellison probably will keep his starting team of Capt. M. Mozeleski, Light McMenamin, Sauerbrun and Silverman intact in these games, but F. Mozeleski, whose work in the Hampden-Sidney game stood out, and Sundin, both have good chances of starting.

AMATEURS OF MANY CLASSES AND COLORS

cuted on charges of professionalism merely because they were alleged to have played baseball for small sums of money in their summer vacation periods. The amounts were insignificant as compared with the $15,000 which Mr. Pyle paid Miss Browne, but nevertheless, the acceptance of these few dollars for summer baseball was deemed to have amateurized the boys for intercollegiate football and all other intercollegiate sport.

Professionalism Of Two Kinds.

Under this interpretation of amateurism, which is probably the strictest in the entire organization of sports in this country, there is no such thing as a localized touch of professionalism in a competitor. The golf association, in changing its mind about Miss Browne's case, holds that professionalism is something like an attack of hang-nail, not affecting the whole person of the accused but in the colleges, professionalism is regarded as something that immediately spreads through the blood-stream and contaminates the victim entirely.

Miss Browne is so decorative in the sports which she essays that one hesitates to suggest that she has not the appearance of an amateur any more. Yet, she has been one of the most persistent of the playing journalists or journalizing of players, and has derived an attractive income at times from her writings about the sports which she plays.

It is a question in my mind whether articles by well-known competitors would sell as readily or command as high a price if they were sent out without the signature of the author. All the more succesful syndicate salesmen tell me that it is much easier to sell great athletic names and personalities than literary excellence or thoughtful comment. The popularity of the works of Mr. Babe Ruth, the most detached journalist of all the absentee authors, illustrates the doubt that I mean to express on this point.

VIRGINIA FIVE ENTERTAINS MARYLAND

Coach Randall Still Experimenting With Squad of 12.

Special to The Washington Post.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Jan. 13. Twelve Cavalier court candidates have been tried in action by Coach Roy Randall in his efforts to work out a winning basket ball combination in the two games played by the University of Virginia Quint.

Virginia took the count in the pair of opening contests. This week the basketers hope that fortune will favor them when they play Maryland tomorrow and William and Mary on Thursday. Both of these games will be played in Memorial Gymnasium.

Capt. Hartwell Harrison has been the only veteran who was started in both contests. Lem Mayo and Bill Thomas, forwards, and Bob Manley and Joe Johnson, guards, opened the first game. In the second, Jim Delafield took Johnsons place as guard. All of these men played with the first-year team of last season, which lost one game.

Coach Randall Faces Big Task.

Andy Merle, forward, and Dave Stouder, guard, who won their "Y" last winter; Leo Fred, former varsity reserve, and Herbert Bryant, Frank Sippley and Harry Steinberg, freshman last season, were all tried during the games in which defeats were taken from Duke and St. John's.

Coach Randall has a most difficult task ahead of him this season. Last year the Cavalier quint earned only one more victory than defeat. Six of the first eight games were lost before the team got started.

Only a remnant remains of this squad for Coach Randall to use as a foundation for the 1930 team. He is building for the future by giving most of his attention to the new men on the squad rather than to those who will not be eligible after this year.

14 Games Scheduled For Lane High Five

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Jan. 13.—The Lane High School Basket Ball Team, which played its first district game Friday night, barely nosing out the Bridgewater Quint, after a hotly contested 5-minute extra period, goes to Harrisonburg Tuesday for its first contest on a foreign court.

The schedule for the remainder of the season is as follows: January 14, Harrisonburg, at Harrisonburg; 16, Woodberry Forest, at home; 22, Waynesboro, at home; 24, R. E. Lee, Staunton, at home; 28, St. Christopher's, at Richmond; 31, V. S. D. B., Staunton, at home.

February 5—Bridgewater, at Bridgewater; 7, Harrisonburg, at home; 8, Fredericksburg, at home; 11, Waynesboro, at Waynesboro; 14, R. E. Lee, at Staunton; 17, V. S. D. B., at Staunton; 20, Hopewell, at home; 21, Clifton Forge, at Clifton Forge.

It is probable that several other games will be listed as the season progresses. The team will be entered in the annual tournament, to be staged at Washington and Lee University. The date for this tournament has yet to be fixed.

Duke Expects Fight From W. & L. Five

Special to The Washington Post.

Durham, N. C., Jan. 13.—The Duke University Basket Ball Team realizes that if it is to make it three conference victories in a row, having already defeated Virginia and Maryland, as well as the Navy, it must exert a powerful offensive on Wednesday night when the Generals of Washington and Lee appear on the Devils' floor. Washington and Lee is generally accredited with having one of the outstanding quints in the South this year.

Duke's victory over Virginia was registered handily, but the Maryland game was anybody's until the last minute, and Duke was fortunate in holding a one-point lead when the final whistle was blown. Some are already wondering what could happen if Duke and Maryland should be paired in the Atlanta tournament in March.

Wednesday evening's tilt will be the first intercollegiate meet of the season in the Duke Gymnasium. Duke's cagers returned Sunday from their tour of Virginia and Maryland, and will take both Monday and Tuesday in putting on a few finishing touches for the Generals.

Penn State-Syracuse Boxing Meet Changed

State College, Pa., Jan. 13.—The Penn State-Syracuse boxing meet, scheduled for March 15, has been switched to Syracuse instead of at State College, Neil M. Fleming, graduate manager of athletics, announced today.

When the schedule was announced a month ago the meet was listed for the State College Gymnasium, but a conflict in dates made it necessary to transfer the engagement to Syracuse.

Two Games This Week For Haverford Five

Haverford, Pa., Jan. 13.—Lehigh University and St. Joseph's College, of Philadelphia, will both appear here this week as opponents of the Haverford College Basket Ball Team. The Brown and White of Lehigh, which waved above the Scarlet and Black of Haverford when they last met in basket ball two years ago, will be encountered on Wednesday night. St. Joseph's will be played on Friday.

Haverford's line-up is expected to include Simons, Katz and Supplee as forwards, R. Edgar at center and Logan, Reisner and Pennypacker at guards. Simons, the freshman star, probably will be given a chance to show his ability at center.

Rutgers Will Face Drexel Five Tonight

New Brunswick, N. J., Jan. 13.—Midweek sports contests this week will engage three Rutgers teams. Then all athletic activity will cease for two weeks while examinations are in progress.

The basket ball quintet will meet Drexel in Philadelphia Tuesday night. On Wednesday night the Scarlet swimming and water polo teams will face C. C. N. Y. in New York City. The swimming and water polo contests were to have been held in Ballantine pool here, but the destruction of the gymnasium by fire Tuesday necessitated a change, and it was decided to hold all home swimming meets, with the exception of these with Yale and Princeton, at the opponents' pool. The Yale and Princeton meets will probably take place in the N. Y. A. C. pool in New York.

STOCK SALES SLUMP TO 1,452,580 SHARES

New $150,000,000 Telephone Financing Is Already Oversubscribed.

CARRIERS' STAGE RALLY

New York, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—The stock market continued to dawdle today, trading falling to the lowest ebb witnessed in a year and a half. Total sales were 1,452,580 shares, the smallest turnover since July 23, 1928, when 1,407,500 shares were traded.

The outstanding item of the day's news was announcement of prompt oversubscription of the $150,000,000 issue of American Telephone bonds, indicating that the demand for investment securities of the better grade still survives.

Buyers of equity shares, however, are disposed to await convincing evidence of a revival in industry before further extensions of their holdings. Also, there is a considerable army of speculators that waits for an upturn to get into swing before attempting to pick the leaders.

Another factor in the market's present stagnation is that considerable stock still seems to be hanging over the market, and may represent unliquidated holdings taken over by banks during the crash. At any rate, every advance attracts selling, which is particularly discouraging to speculators for the rise.

Bear Drives Fail.

On the other hand, bear drives have been dismally unsuccessful of late.

The market has not yet touched the lowest levels of activity reached in July, 1928, when the so-called Coolidge bull market received a blow with an increase in the Federal Reserve bank rate. On only three days of that month did total sales exceed 2,000,000 shares, and the minimum for a full session was less than 1,300,000.

Corporate and trade news over the week-end was unimpressive, and today brought few new developments. Passing of the Brunswick-Balke-Collender common dividend was not unexpected. A pleasing development was the increase in cigarette prices by the Liggett stores in the metropolitan area, indicating a passing of the latest price-cutting war. Credit conditions remained steady, with call money holding at 4½ per cent. Bankers look for some easing as the week progresses.

The market moved irregularly lower during the morning, and amateur bear selling appeared to be a contributing factor. A substantial rally set in during the last hour, however, centering in the rails. Pennsylvania was a strong feature, advancing more than 3 points in a large turnover. This was a comparatively wide move for this stock. It has been sluggish of late, but the rights expire Wednesday, and today's buying was attributed to quarters in which better action for the stock after the expiration of the rights has been predicted. Coppers sagged a little, in selling in anticipation of unfavorable December statistics as to stocks of the red metal on hand. Montgomery Ward was a target for the bears for a time, but closed only about 1 point off.

Auburn Auto Advances.

Allied Chemical and Auburn Auto mounted about 6 points. Shares closing about 2 to 3 points higher included American and Foreign Power, American Tobacco, Chesapeake & Ohio, Columbian Carbon, General Electric, Hershey Chocolate, Michigan and Newton Steels, Radio Keith, Hudson Motor, Wabash and Western Union. U. S. Steel closed at 171, up 1⅜. Brunswick Balke broke about 4 points to a new low at 14. Pierce Arrow A and Industrial Rayon also fell back about 4 points.

Commodities largely moved in narrow ranges. Wheat futures, however, lost about 1½ cents a bushel, reflecting reports of cheaper Argentine offerings and slackening foreign demand. Corn closed steady, however. Cotton futures sagged for a time, but rallied to close a little higher.

Foreign exchanges generally continued to sag. Sterling Cables dipped ⅛ cent to $4.87⅞, the Spanish peseta, on the other hand, rallied further, closing about 1-3 cent higher.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

Chicago, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—Despite rallies in late trading, Chicago wheat prices today finished at the lowest closing level shown here for some time. Among the main depressing factors was a surprise increase of 4,660,000 bushels in the amount of wheat supplies afloat on the ocean. Together with word that France, usually an importing country, is selling wheat to Great Britain. Announcement of 3,311,000 bushels decrease of the United States wheat visible supply failed to act as a counterbalance.

Chicago closing quotations on wheat were nervous 1 cent to 1⅞ cents a bushel under Saturday's finish. Corn closed unchanged to ⅛@⅜ cent higher, oats ⅛ cent to ½ cent off and provisions unchanged to a rise of 2 cents. Unexpected downturns in wheat values at Liverpool today did much to bring about price setbacks here as soon as trading began, especially as news of a big increase in supplies on ocean passage to Europe was emphasized by reports of inactive demand abroad. Furthermore, signs indicated that foreigners were selling wheat future deliveries here and advices were received that Argentine new crop wheat, January-February shipment, was being offered in Germany 2 cents a bushel cheaper than United States hard winter grades. Adding to the downward trend of the Chicago market were messages saying No. 1 Northern wheat was obtainable on the sample tables in Minneapolis at $1.25 a bushel, a price down to exact equality with the Federal Farm Board loan basis.

Price rallies that took place toward the last in the Chicago wheat market today came about chiefly as a result of buying to collect profits for speculators who previously had been sellers. Shrinkage of the United States wheat visible supply figures today had apparently been discounted in advance, and was of but little effect as a market influence. Final estimates of export business in North American wheat today put the total at only 600,000 bushels, mostly Canadian.

Corn prices developed relative strength today, weather conditions over the corn belt being generally adverse for corn movement. There were also complaints that unseasonable warmth and excessive moisture is causing deterioration of corn still in the fields. Oats were responsive to wheat market weakness.

Provisions tended upward, owing chiefly to absence of any unusual pressure to sell.

BOND PRICES SLUMP DUE TO NEW ISSUES

$30,000,000 and $3,358,000 in Financing Announced by Two Companies.

CARRIERS REMAIN FIRM

New York, Jan. 13 (A.P.).—New financing operations dominated bond trading today and the market struggled through one of the dullest sessions in recent months. Prices tended to ease under the counter attractions of issues either offered or pending.

The outstanding event of the day, of course, was the flotation of the American Telephone Co.'s $150,000,000 loan in 35-year debenture 5s. It was reported unofficially that the subscription was nearly four times the principal amount, and the bonds promptly sold at a premium on a when-issued basis, ranging between 100¾ and 100⅞, against the offering price of 99½.

Such a reception for the largest issue in several months had the effect of strengthening sentiment, although it was pointed out by some experts that part of the inquiry doubtless came from sources seeking an immediate profit in an otherwise sluggish market. Nevertheless, it was believed that the success of the loan would encourage other important offerings. One of the prospective issues, the Associated Gas & Electric Co.'s $30,000,000 convertible 5 per cent issue, is to be marketed later in the week at a reported price of 90.

Industrials Soften Little.

In general, quotations on listed bonds made only unimportant changes today. The highest grade rails and utilities were fairly firm, and such declines as appeared averaged less than a half a point. Industrials were softer. Only a few transactions in United States Governments were recorded and prices scaled down, with a loss of slightly more than a quarter point in the Treasury 3¾s.

Miscellaneous issues closing at small net declines included Baltimore & Ohio gold 4s, U. S. Rubber 5s, Southern Railway general 4s, St. Louis & San Francisco 4½s, Southwestern Bell Telephone 5s, Burlington 4½s, Columbia Gas & Electric 5s, May maturity, and a few others.

Price Structure Is Good.

The underlying firmness of the price structure was apparent, however, in high-grade loans for which buying inquiry appeared, and a representative list made slight improvement.

Convertibles did little either way, keeping pace with the slow gait of the stock market. Foreign bonds were likewise stagnant. State and municipal Latin-American moved higher, but European government issues were dull, although firm.

Tomorrow's new offerings include a $3,358,000 issue of Providence of New Brunswick 30-year 5s, priced at 99.75.

26 DISTRICT BANKS TO HOLD MEETINGS

Many of City's Firms Are to Elect Directors and Officers Today.

CAPITAL TRACTION GAINS

By THOMAS M. CAHILL.

Thirty-four institutions including 26 banks will hold their annual meetings today, the biggest day for such in the local business calendar. All of the national banks hold annual meetings today according to law and numerous savings banks and trust companies also select this date for their yearly meetings. Some banks will elect or reelect both officers and directors today, others deferring their officers' meetings until later in the week or month.

Few changes are expected among officers. A vice president of the Washington Loan & Trust Co. retired recently, and this vacancy may be filled. The Federal-American National bank may fill a vacancy caused by the death of a director, this leaving two vacancies on its board, two others having been filled last week. Riggs National Bank recently filled a vacancy of this kind.

Six concerns held their annual meetings yesterday. These were the Bank of Brightwood, the Lincoln Hall Association, the District Title Insurance Co., the Lawyers' Title Insurance Co., the Washington Title Insurance Co. and the Mutual Building Association.

Lincoln Hall Officers Elected.

Charles H. Korts was elected a new trustee of Lincoln Hall Association and the following officers and trustees were reelected; Allen C. Clark, president; William H. Rapley, treasurer; George R. Repetti, secretary; Appleton P. Clark, jr., William W. Rapley, W. B. Rapley.

At the regular meeting of stockholders of The Washington Title Insurance Co., the following were elected directors for the ensuing year: Arthur G. Bishop, Ernest L. Smith, George H. At the meeting of stockholders of The District Title Insurance Co., the following were elected directors: Charles G. Allen, Arthur G. Bishop, Edward C. Baltz, Edmund D. Rheem, Alfred H. Lawson, Sidney T. Thomas, R. G. Buck, William C. Miller, Eugene A. Smith, Joseph I. Weller, H. L. Rust, jr., Carl J. Bergmann, John P. Story, and T. Howard Duckett.

At the meeting of stockholders of The Lawyers Title Insurance Co., the following were elected directors: Arthur G. Bishop, Charles W. Stetson, Joseph N. Saunders, Harry M. Packard, Ernest L. Schmidt, Albert P. Miles, Theodore N. Gill, jr., Eugene A. Smith, George M. Emmerich, Clarence P. Donohoe, Charles H. Bauman, Charles H. Kindle, James McD. Shea, and Charles B. Gillett.

Brightwood Bank Directors Reelected.

All officers and directors of the Bank of Brightwood were reelected, they being: Raymond L. Schriener, president and cashier; C. L. Osborn, Barton W. Perry, vice presidents; C. J. Sincell, assistant cashier; directors: Charles H. Gaskins, C. J. Sincell, H. Mason Welch, E. H. Ankeny, E. L. Bullard, John F. Ertter, W. L. Gary, George W. Langley, Samuel Moore, Joseph Nicholson, C. L. Osborn, William A. Pate, jr., Barton W. Perry, Raymond L. Schreiner, D. F. Swab, T. C. Towson, and John Wischhausen.

Declines for the week of $531,000,000 in loans and investments, $696,000,000 in net demand deposits, $61,000,000 in borrowings from Federal reserve banks and $36,000,000 in Government deposits, with a gain of $60,000,000 in time deposits were shown yesterday in the Federal Reserve Board's condition statement of weekly reporting member banks in leading cities on January 8.

Loans on securities receded $418,000,000 and all other loans, $171,000,000, at all reporting banks. Holdings of United States Government securities increased $109,000,000 at all reporting banks and those of other securities decreased $51,000,000 at all of them.

Linotype Stock Advances.

Capital Traction stock still continued to rise at the week's opening of the Washington Stock Exchange yesterday, 23 shares moving at 82½, fractional advance. Thirty shares of Riggs National Bank changed hands at 515 and 20 of Mergenthaler Linotype at 106½, half point gain. Twenty-five shares of Peoples Drug Stores preferred traded at fractional increases from 103⅞.

There was a $3,000 transfer of Capital Traction 5s bonds at fractional gains over 92¼. Bond sales volume totaled $4,500, $1,000 below Saturday's aggregate, and the stock turnover increased 29 shares to a total of 106.

Instructors in Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, are giving final exmafnations for the first semester of the chapter's courses. Finals in three courses were given last week, the class in credits under Edward J. McQuade, that in commercial law, under Raymond B. Dickey, and the economics class by F. J. Donahue.

Bank Course Examinations Set.

Examinations in three other courses will be held tonight, these being in negotiable instruments, under B. J. Laws; banking fundamentals, under Eliot H. Thomson, and investments, under J. C. Dulin. The midyear recess will continue until January 27, and on January 24 chapter consuls, officers and members of the educational committee will hold a dinner at the Raleigh Hotel to complete plans for the second semester. This dinner will be attended by Harold Stonier, New York, educational director, American Institute of Banking.

H. F. Kimball, American Security & Trust Co., and chairman of the athletic committee of the chapter, announced yesterday that the chapter's bowling team, which played that of the Baltimore chapter Saturday, was defeated by the latter team. The five-man team match resulted in a victory for Baltimore. The doubles were won by the Washington team and the singles by Baltimore. Total number of pins for all three matches were: Baltimore, 4,400; Washington, 4,291.

Perpetual Building Directors.

At the regular monthly meeting of directors of the Perpetual Building Association, Eleventh and E streets, yesterday, Edward C. Baltz was elected secretary, succeeding the late Joshua W. Carr, and Raymond K. Espey was elected assistant secretary, succeeding Mr Baltz. Mr. Baltz has been connected with the association for the past twenty years, serving it in various capacities.

The growth of the association has been so rapid during the past few years, that it now ranks twentieth in size on a list of 13,500 building associations throughout the United States.

EPISCOPAL MISSION CHAPEL DEDICATED

New Fairfax County Edifice Rpelaces One Burned Last Year.

MANY CLUBS TO MEET

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Vienna, Va.
Phone Vienna 64.

The new Groveton Episcopal Mission Chapel was filled to overflowing Sunday evening, when the chapel was dedicated by the Rt. Rev. Henry St. George Tucker, bishop of Virginia.

The services were in charge of the Rev. Martin J. Bram, of Delaware, who was in charge of the mission last year when the former building was burned. An organist and the vestry choir from the Theological Seminary provided the music. The dedicatory sermon was preached by Bishop Tucker, assisted by Sherwood Clayton, present bishop.

The chapel itself replaces the one destroyed. Its appearance, both inside and out surpasses the old structure. Some of the new features include several memorials placed by members in memory of former members.

The chapel seats about 100 persons and has many modern conveniences. The history of the mission started 50 years ago. The first sermon ever preached there was by the late Francis Key Leavell, on April 4, 1880.

The students first in charge of the chapel were the late Rev. Jacob Brittingham, the Rev. Francis Key Leavell, and the Rev. Mr. Miller. The Rev. Dr. Kensey Johns Hammond, of St. Marks Church, was also on the charter list.

Until 1903, services were conducted in the school house of the community. Various efforts were made to secure money with which to build a chapel.

After the fire last year plans were immediately made by the people of the community to rebuild. Through the efforts of the Rev. Martin J. Bram enough funds were soon supplied.

The register of the Grovetown Chapel contains the names of several men who were in charge of the chapel, and have now become distinguished in church circles. Among them are Bishop John P. Tyler, present bishop of North Dakota; the late Bishop Lucian Kinsloving, first bishop of Brazil; the Right Rev. Middleton Stuart Barnwell, bishop of Idaho; the Right Rev. C. L. Quinn, bishop of Texas; the Right Rev. R. E. Strider, bishop coadjutor of West Virginia. Many of the leaders of this chapel have gone to do work in foreign fields. Among them are Dr. B. L. Ancell, China; Joseph Wood, China; Kenneth Morris, Japan; Josselyn Reed, Liberia; Dymoke Gasson, Brazil, and Michael Kippenbrook, Alaska.

The students now in charge are Sherwood S. Clayton, H. Fairfield Butt 3d, and William Marmion. The vestrymen of the chapel are W. F. P. Reid, George K. Pickett, Harry Pearson, A. D. Kirby, Albert Harrison and Parker Richardson.

Plans are now being made for the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the mission some time in the spring.

OFFICE SEEKER

JUDGE HOWARD W. SMITH.

ALEXANDRIA JUDGE TO RUN FOR HOUSE

Howard W. Smith Enters His Candidacy for Moore's Seat.

COHEN'S STORE ROBBED

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
312 S. Washington St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

Judge Howard W. Smith, of the Sixteenth judicial district of Virginia, yesterday announced his candidacy for Congress from the Eighth District, to succeed R. Walton Moore, who has served the district since the resignation of Charles C. Carlin, in 1919. Judge Smith, in announcing his candidacy, gave out the following statement:

"After mature consideration, I have decided to become a candidate for Congress from the Eighth District of Virginia. Hon. R. Walton Moore having publicly expressed his purpose and desire to retire at the conclusion of his present term. I shall, therefore, be a candidate subject to the Democratic primary of August 5.

"Should I be so fortunate as to be the choice of my people for this important office, I can only promise that I will devote to the interests of my constituents the same measure of energy and diligence that has characterized my activities as a public servant in various capacities for the past 20 years."

Judge Smith was appointed judge of the Sixteenth judicial district of Virginia in 1928, by Gov. Harry Flood Byrd, to succeed the late Judge Samuel G. Brent. His district comprises the counties of Arlington, Prince William and Fauquier, and the City of Alexandria, and he has become very popular throughout his circuit.

He is 46 years old, was born and reared on a farm in Fauquier County, and received his early education at old Bethel Military Academy in that county. After his graduation from that school he studied law at the University of Virginia, receiving his Bachelor of Law degree when he was only 20 years old, and returned to his father's farm, where he remained until he attained his majority. He then entered the practice of law in Alexandria, where he has since resided.

Judge Smith has served successively as president of the common council of Alexandria, as Commonwealth's attorney of that city, and in 1922 was appointed judge of the Corporation Court, subsequently being elected to that position by the Legislature. While not a candidate for the position of Circuit Judge, he was appointed to that bench in 1928.

The judge has never severed his relations with his native county of Fauquier, and still maintains a summer home there, where he operates an extensive dairy farm with an accredited herd. He has been a successful business man and is president of the Alexandria National Bank. He is a member of the Protestant Episcopal Church, of Alexandria Lodge, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, Potomac Lodge of Odd Fellows and Alexandria-Washington Lodge of Masons.

Although Representative Moore made public announcement some time ago of his intention not to again be a candidate for reelection, Judge Smith is the only one whose name has so far been mentioned as a possible successor, and it is regarded as probable that he will have no serious opposition. He has many warm friends in Alexandria, as well as throughout his circuit, who look upon him as a logical and worthy successor to Mr. Moore, whose record in Congress has been an enviable one.

President Hoover yesterday assured a committee of the George Washington Birthday Association that he would accept the invitation of the association to review the parade to be held in connection with the celebration here of Washington's Birthday on February 22, provided he has no other engagements which would prevent his attending. He added that, so far as he is aware, he has no previous engagement.

The committee extending the invitation was headed by Representative R. Walton Moore, of the Eighth District of Virginia, and included Mayor William Albert Smoot, Harry D. Kirk, president of the association; Martin E. Greene, secretary; Col. John H. Trimyer, J. William May, Francis H. Fannon, W. B. Fulton and Michael T. Dwyer. The President told Representative Moore that he would give a definite reply within a day or two.

The President's attendance at the celebration will mean that Gov. John Garland Pollard, of Virginia, and his staff, will also attend, and that the governor will in all probability be escorted by the Richmond Light Infantry Blues Battalion, one of the most famous military organizations in the country.

The virtual acceptance by the President of the invitation to come to Alexandria has already given considerable impetus to the movement for the celebration. It also means that the event will take on a national aspect, bringing to Alexandria on February 22 many members of both houses of Congress, members of the Diplomatic Corps, many Virginia legislators and other distinguished guests.

President Coolidge reviewed the last parade, held on February 22, 1928, from a glass-inclosed stand on North Washington street. It is the intention of the association to erect a similar stand this year for the accommodation of President Hoover, who will be fully protected in the event of inclement weather.

Gilbert J. Sox, jr., clerk to the City School Board, has written a letter to City Manager Wallace Lawrence with recommendations from the school board to the council relative to changing the boundaries of the two school districts of the city, to be presented at the council meeting on Thursday.

The proposed change is as follows: District No. 1, all of that territory lying south and east of a line beginning at the intersection of Janney's Lane and Quaker Lane, following the center of Janney's Lane to King street, from thence to center of King street to Walnut street, and from the center of Walnut street to the Richmond, Fredericksburg & Potomac Railroad tracks, then following these tracks to the nothern limits of the city.

District No. 2, to be all the territory north and west of the same dividing line.

The old dividing line of the two districts was the center of King street. The main purpose of this change is to give representation to the citizens of the newly annexed territory on the City School Board.

The school board has awarded a contract to make extensive improvements to the roof of the George Mason High School Building.

Mrs. Minnegerode Andrews will address the meeting of the Business and Professional Women's Club at the meeting this evening, at the George Mason Hotel, on the campaign which opens today for the restoration of Stratford, the birthplace of Gen. Robert E. Lee.

After midnight tonight the 1929 automobile license tags will be obsolete, and all drivers using them will be subject to arrest. The statement has been made by J. Frank Carlin, local agent for the Motor Vehicle Commissioner, that so far the sale of tags has been about 500 less than at the same date last year.

Many persons who have failed to procure the new license tags are in the position of not having received the necessary certificate from the office of the State Motor Vehicle Commissioner in Richmond. Other persons who have just recently purchased new cars have failed to receive prompt answers to their requests for registration of the machines.

The chamber of commerce, Fred C. Goodnow, president, is sponsoring a get-together dinner on January 28, at 7:30 p. m., in the George Mason Hotel, for the business and professional men of the new and old city, to be known as the Greater Alexandria meeting, and will have Francis Short, New York lecturer, address the gathering on "Building a Community."

Members of the Alexandria Light Infantry will pass tonight in the armory, leaving at 6:30 tomorrow morning for Richmond to participate in the inaugural parade of Governor-elect John Garland Pollard. The work of equipping the company with new style uniforms was completed last night, and pay checks for the quarter ending December 31 were distributed.

Burglars on Sunday night entered the store of Abe L. Cohen, 1104 King street, and stole clothing valued at over $100, including two dozen scarfs, eight pairs of gloves, four dozen collare, one suit, three hats and other articles. Entrance was made by climbing over one of the show windows and reaching through the glass, which was broken, and opening a catch at the top of the transom.

Henry T. Moncure, principal of the Alexandria High School, will present a program at the meeting of the Rotary Club today at the George Mason Hotel. George F. Downham, N. F. Lawler and Francis H. Fannon will report on plans for the ladies' night entertainment on Tuesday of the coming week at the Belle Haven Country Club.

BYRD NOT TO SEEK SEAT IN CONGRESS

Retiring Governor's Friends Say He Will Supervise Business Affairs.

CANDIDATES ARE VIEWED

Special to The Washington Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., Jan. 13.—Gov. Harry Flood Byrd, who retires as chief executive of Virginia day after tomorrow, will not be a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Congress in his home (Seventh) district, it was learned here today authoritatively from his close political friends in the Shenandoah Valley.

The retiring governor, after 14 years of service to his State, 10 of which were spent in the State Senate, wishes to get back into the management of his business interests in the Valley. These include extensive apple orchards in Rockingham, Clarke and Frederick Counties and two daily newspapers at Harrisonburg and Winchester.

Upon his retirement Wednesday from the governor's chair, Mr. Byrd will go to his home near Berryville, in Clarke County, and again plunge into active direction of his orchards and newspapers, his friends say. Despite the fact that he has not taken a vacation during the past year he does not plan one this winter, nor spring, being anxious to get back in harness without delay.

Name Often Suggested.

The name of Gov. Byrd has been suggested many times as Democratic nominee next November to oppose Representative J. A. Garber, of Harrisonburg, who was elected in the Hoover landslide in 1928.

It was learned here today from the governor's close friends that he has definitely decided not to seek the Congressional nomination, feeling that he owes his first obligation to his business affairs. Those Democrats who have suggested Gov. Byrd's nomination for the Congressional nomination felt that he would be named without a fight and would easiyl carry the Seventh district, which is normally Democratic by 5,000 majority.

Definite decision by Gov. Byrd not to declare for the congressional nomination will probably result in a fight for the honor.

Potential Candidates Loom.

Names being discussed here among Democratic district leaders are Attorney John T. Harris, of Harrisonburg, son of a former congressman; Attorney Aubrey Weaver, of Front Royal; Col. Joseph Bauserman, of Woodstock, special prohibition prosecutor; Judge Fishburne, of Charlottesville; Lem Smith, Albemarle County prosecutor; Frank Tavener, jr., of Woodstock, Shenandoah County juvenile judge; State Senator Ward Swank, Harrisonburg; G. F. Holsinger, Rockingham, president of Virginia Farm Bureau Federation; William E. Carson, Riverton, chairman of State Conservation and Development Commission.

Democratic leaders are anxious to avoid a heated fight for the nomination and hope that by the time the candidates are to be chosen, the contest will narrow down to two or three aspirants.

Daily O'Currences

By JOHN DALY

LUELLA brought in the mail.

"Here's a letter for you from the Treasury Department," she said, flicking a manila envelope on the table.

"The Treasury Department? Who do I know in the Treasury——"

"Perhaps Mr. Mellon——"

"Oh, no! Not Mr. Mellon."

"Open it," she pleaded, looking over my shoulder, "and see what it says."

There it was, in all its glory, the well known Individual Income Tax form.

"Just when I am getting ready to enjoy a Happy New Year," complained Luella. A tear trickled from her lachrymal duct.

"This, indeed, is a red letter day in our lives," I remarked, glancing at a notice to taxpayers—the poor souls—a note that really takes some of the sting out of this annual message from the Government. 'Twas dolled up in red ink and it carried a pretty sentiment from Uncle Sam. All income taxes are reduced 1 per cent.

* * * *

"IT may be red to you," flashed Luella, "but it makes me green with envy."

"Envy? What envy?"

"Think of merely mailing letters to people and getting back real money. Why can't we do that?"

"We could, but it wouldn't be legal."

"I suppose," she snapped, "it would also be unethical—one of your pet phrases. Well, unethical or not, I'm going to get into this business——"

"What business?"

"The tax collection business!"

HO, HO! So that's her game.

"Well, let me tell you something, Luella. Lay off the income tax returns or Uncle Sam will send some of his sleuths out this way and cart you off to the Hoose-Gow!"

"The Hoose-Gow? What's the Hoose-Gow?"

"In plain, simple language, the Hoose-Gow is the old American Jail House."

"They wouldn't put a woman in jail, would they?"

"They wouldn't? Try, and see!"

* * * *

SHE gave up in despair. "There just seems to be no way out of our financial difficulties," she sighed, touching me for a five-spot.

"Oh, yes there is," I told her, for consolation, "Where there's a will there's a way——"

"A way to do what?"

"To break it."

"How are you going to get around this?" she asked, waving the Treasury Department's little love note aloft.

"That? We'll just ignore that——"

"Then we'll go to the, er, uh, Goose-Cow!"

"Oh, no, we won't either!"

"Why?"

"'Cause we haven't any income—worth recording."

"Isn't it great to be broke?" asked Luella, laughingly.

It was, however, rather a hollow laugh. Deep down in her heart she feels sorry for the poor old Government thus deprived of an income tax return.

"Next year," she remarked, "we must do something for Uncle Sam. We'll have him out to dinner!"

VIRGINIA ASSEMBLY WILL VISIT CAPITAL

Accepts Invitation to Session of Planning Commission Next Friday Night.

HEARS BUDGET BARED

Special to The Washington Post.

Richmond, Va., Jan. 13.—The Virginia General Assembly today unanimously accepted an invitation of Senator Frank L. Ball, of Arlington, and Delegate Hugh Reid, of Arlington, to adjourn Friday, and, with Gov. Pollard, attend a meeting in Constitution Hall in Washington of the National Park and Planning Commission. The members will go to Washington by bus Friday morning and will be guests of Arlington County during the day on a sightseeing trip through northern Virginia and Washington.

The day was also marked by the assignment to committees of House members and the passage of the governor's salary bill, which raises the pay for the office from $5,000 to $10,000, the first increase since 1869.

Two Senate bills, proposed by Senator Ball, which would validate certain bonds of the City of Alexandria in connection with its annexation of Arlington County territory, were taken up out of their order and passed by the Senate, before both houses met together to receive Gov. Byrd for the last time officially and hear his explanation of the budget.

Committee Assignments.

Committee assignments that went to northern Virginia were: William C. Hall, of Loudoun, as chairman of the finance committee and membership on several other important committees; J. Fred Birrell, Alexandria, chairman House expenditures and seats on finance and counties, cities and towns committee; Hugh Reid, of Arlington, on the counties, cities and towns, Federal relations and resolutions, general laws and House expenditures committees.

Going immediately in the face of an adverse commission report, Senators Hill Montague, Richmond; Saxon, W. Holt, Newport News, and N. B. Early, of Greene, introduced a bill in the Senate which would provide for the establishment of a liberal arts college for women in conjunction with the University of Virginia. The bill carries an appropriation of $25,000 with which the site for such a college would be acquired.

The measure points to the fact that the State is taxing its citizens without regard to sex and, therefore, should give women opportunities of education equal to those given men. It came as a complete surprise following the report of a commission which has been studying such a proposal, recommending against such a course.

Governor's Budget Warning.

Gov. Byrd went into a technical discussion of the budget and the budget bill, explaining the various items, one by one, and firmly warning the legislators not to exceed the budget estimate in that "going any higher is not warranted at this time when many citizens of Virginia have suffered losses as the result of the recent stock market crash and resultant business depression."

The budget, which carries appropriation of more than $101,000,000 for the 28 months that follow March 1, is for a budget period 17 per cent longer than the usual two-year period, he explained, because of an extra four months that is added to make the appropriation year begin July 1.

Of the total, he said, $23,000,000 is from sources other than taxation—revenues from schools and the like—while $31,000,000 comes in the gasoline tax, license tax and other segregated funds, leaving only $42,000,000 to be secured through taxation, giving an increase of 9 per cent from the general fund. He said that because of the depression only $1,500,000 is estimated from income taxes for 1930, whereas in 1929 this source of revenue furnished $2,085,000.

Nine Bills Affect Courts.

A series of nine bills which would have a far-reaching effect on the practice of State courts, bringing them closer in operation to Federal courts, was presented by Senator Buchanan for the judicial council of the State Bar Association.

One of these bills would provide that a jury in criminal cases would find only guilt and degree of guilt, allowing the court, within limits, to fix the punishment, while others would provide that an answer under oath have no weight unless in response to a pleading expressly asking for an answer; that bonds be required for completion of any building where contract price is more than $1,000, entered into by any school board or any county or city or the Commonwealth of Virginia or any subdivision; that, in civil cases, where a jury disagrees and the court believes there is sufficient evidence, the court may enter judgment; that in case of nonsuit, it must be moved before the same court; that the time for filing an answer in chancery be changed from six months to 60 days, and that "in any chancery cause the court, on its motion, or upon motion of any party, complainant or defendant, may in its discretion direct that the whole or any part of the evidence be taken and heard orally before the court, and the court may require such evidence to be taken and preserved as a part of the record in such cause."

Shell-Shocked Veteran Held on Girl's Charge

Special to The Washington Post.

Lynchburg, Va., Jan. 13.—H. W. Paxton, 40, married, a shell-shocked World War veteran, is in custody here, charged with criminal attack upon a 16-year-old white girl late Saturday night. The girl told police Sunday that she was forced into Paxton's car and her younger brother supported her claim during her absence.

Paxton admits forcing the girl into his car and driving her into Campbell County, but denies her other charge. He was arrested by the police on description furnished by his alleged victim.
